INTRODUCTORY

This second volume of Atwater History and Genealogy, coming, as it does, only a few years after the first, seemed to the author to be a necessary supplement, as so much additional matter had been accumulated, so many omissions filled in, and so many corrections brought to light, that to him it became a duty he could not let go unfulfilled, knowing that if not put into a permanent form of record while in his power to do so, much of it would be lost to the family forever.

It has been found advisable to reproduce in full the lineage of the Atwaters from David, the emigrant, who with his brother, Joshua, came to America in 1637, including the last child born, or so many of the descendants as could be ascertained. If this volume shall be incomplete the censure must rest upon the heads of those who are perfectly indifferent to kindred, or devoid of the courtesy that would take a few minutes to reply to a polite inquiry, with return envelope and postage provided. Scattered over this country and in Canada are hundreds of letters which, if answered, would have made this work ten times as rich in family lore, to say nothing of making its pedigree perfect.

In this connection, to the writer, it seems so strange that this should be so, especially in a people uniformly kind, generous, obliging and good-hearted as I have found each and every one it has been my good fortune to become acquainted with. Even those who under no circumstances would permit themselves to write the desired information, when called upon personally were profuse in apologies, and, in turn, so hospitable and furnished so much material, that it is hard to reconcile in one's mind they could be the same persons possessing such opposite characteristics.

Character sketches, which appeared in the first volume, are omitted in the second, also the pedigrees of allied families. No attempt has been made to add anything to the exhaustive work of the late Robert H. Atwater on the English ancestry, though by the kindness of William C. Atwater, of New York, more recent pictures of the old ancestral Atwater homestead are printed, including photographs of the rich carvings of pulpit and doors extant in the sixteenth century, with a short description of the town of Lenham as he found it on two visits made to this quaint old place in 1901 and 1902.

In company with Mr. F. F. Street, of Hartford, a relative of the family of Mr. Elias B. Bishop, the writer on a bright May day visited the territory covered by Cedar Hill and East Rock in New Haven, which was formerly owned by the first David Atwater and later by his descendants, although in recent years most of it has passed outside of the family. Mrs. Bishop was Grace Clarissa, daughter of Major Lyman Atwater, who in his day was one of the most enterprising citizens New Haven could lay claim to, perhaps one of his greatest undertakings being the building of a section of the old Farmington canal, which ran from New Haven through Mt. Carmel, Cheshire, Southington and Farmington into Western Massachusetts. Mrs. Bishop succeeded in possession of her father's home, and it was here that Mr. Street passed most of his youthful days.

It was to live over for a few brief moments the scenes of those times he desired to visit the old house, and to familiarize himself with family reminiscences the writer was pleased to accept the kind invitation to go along. Cedar Hill obtains its name from having been covered with cedar trees, which no longer ago than Mr. Street's youth was really a forest of this variety. The hill, composed mostly of sand, has nearly disappeared; in the first place being graded for the street and the second cut into for the ten-track-wide railroad which occupies the ground. This was taken from the farm of Medad Atwater, a brother of Lyman, the house and barn still remaining. If the barn could talk it could tell that it was a busy mart when in its prime and played an important part in the great West India trade which was plied with New Haven, to the enrichment of many of its old families. This farm was the depot where droves of horses, mules and cattle were placed until taken aboard ship. They came from the west on foot, and finished their destination in sailing ships, many of which were wholly or partly owned by members of the Atwater family.

Starting from Cedar Hill along Fleet street, now called State street, for a distance of nearly two miles, all the houses and land belonged to the family one hundred years ago. The old brick house, supposed to have been built by the second David Atwater, illustrated in the first volume, stood perhaps half way in this long stretch. From its outward appearance it may well be imagined that it was very pretentious and aristocratic in its day and no doubt the envy of the neighborhood. The wind and storms of 200 years did not affect its original strength, but in April, 1905, it took fire and was totally destroyed in an hour's time.

The house visited by Mr. Street and the writer, it is conjectured, was built by David Atwater of the fourth generation, probably taking there in 1746 his young bride, Elizabeth, daughter of John Bassett, who was the mother of his twelve children. It then came to Medad, then to "Major" Lyman, who transferred it to his daughter, Grace Clarissa, who married Elias B. Bishop. We traversed it from room to room, stopping in each one, while Mr. Street told interesting tales of his young life, dwelling particularly upon the sweet and motherly tenderness of Mrs. Bishop as she smoothed out his pillow at night and left him to peaceful dreams. Those memories he cherishes still, but only in sadness and tears, for the good woman has gone to her Maker, and the house, while still standing, is only an apology of its former days. It is occupied but the hand of the goodwife is missing. It is in good preservation so far as the wood work is concerned, and its hardware, such as latches and hinges, forged by hand, is a marvel of the blacksmith's art. The children born in this house living to be adults, both men and women, became distinguished as leaders in society, were highly educated, refined in taste, of unexcelled manners, extremely hospitable, and of unblemished characters. One of the sons, Lyman Hotchkiss, son of Major Lyman Atwater, was a gentleman of most scholarly attainments.

and was connected with Princeton college as professor and vice-president for nearly thirty years.

Elias Bishop, who married into the family and through his wife became the owner of the large farm, besides cultivating it, was an enterprising and successful dealer in live stock, especially in supplying both mules and horses for the West Indian traders of New Haven in great numbers. Mr. Street tells the story but does not vouch for its truth that the business began rather queerly. It seems in the early days of clock making that Yankee peddlers went South and West to sell their time-pieces. Money being scarce they bartered mules for clocks, and, it is said, in one deal fifty mules were taken for fifty clocks. Whether true or not the business became extensive and Mr. Bishop proved himself a man of uncommon executive ability in its management. He was a public spirited man, and the world was better for having him a part of it.

Mr. Street relates the story told by "Major" Lyman of an early recollection of his home. On a very dark, stormy night there was pounding at the front door. Father, followed by us boys, opened it when he was confronted by the sheriff, who asked in a loud voice, "Have you seen anything of that d—d David Austin?" He was answered "No." The sheriff continued, "the cuss broke jail when the keeper took in his supper to-night and he came this way." The person referred to was the Rev. David Austin, who had run in debt to improve the New Haven green. His creditors, not willing to wait for their money, had him put in jail. The minister, anticipating the "line" storm had told his servant to bring his saddle horse to the jail at supper time the first stormy night. At the opportune time he got behind his jailer, rushed out of the door, locking it behind him. He rode through rain, mud and darkness to Wethersfield, where he spent a week with his sister. There he learned a reward was offered for his capture. He immediately returned to the sheriff, claimed the amount, was paid it, and in turn paid his debts and was free.

A few yards southeast of the Lyman Atwater place stands the brick house built by his brother, Eldad, to all outward appearances in a good state of preservation. Some rods to the north is the home of Horace Atwater, an old gentleman in his eighty-third year, when we visited him in the spring of 1905. He was quite feeble, but conversed entertainingly about himself and other members of the family he had known. He had always lived within a few rods of where he was born, and in his younger years in common with his father, uncles and cousins, had drawn stone from East Rock to New Haven to furnish hundreds of house foundations and miles of the supporting walls for the railroad cut. The whole of East Rock, except the roadway and some common land near the top, reserved for people to get stone free, belonged to his family, and was sold to the city for park purposes. His three sons live nearby, two being market gardeners. One son, James M., lives on his great-uncle George's place, which has a venerable large old elm its owner is justly proud of. Uncle George, when he died, left nearly all of his property, amounting to some $22,000, to the insane poor of the town of Hamden.

In tracing the lineage of the North Carolina Atwaters there was one amusing feature that should be told. To secure the names of the family to write to, the different city and town directories were consulted. There were quite a number of Atwaters who were slave owners, the slaves when freed taking the name of the master to whom they formerly belonged. Not knowing this fact, the names of several were ascertained and written to for their ancestry. Several replied, but in no instance did they state their condition, nor was it ascertained until others had been corresponded with. In this connection is printed an answer to one inquiry:

“In your letter you wrote that you found children of Stephen Atwater in Norfolk, Va. Stephen Atwater was a negro who belonged to my father and was my nurse when I was a child. He was a faithful slave and with my father's help and counsel he made a good living after freed and now lives on his own farm and is respected by his neighbors because of his good character. He is the last of my father's old slaves now living and if he dies before I do I will attend his burial as I have done all the old ones who have died. When the older negroes die out and their influence ceases to be a force, the negro will not be respected as his fathers were, because of his unworthiness. Freedom to the average negro has been a curse. The morale of the race is bad—bad indeed—because of the lack of restraint, and it really seems the tendency is toward barbarism. I am sorry to say it, but the philanthropists in the north who didn't understand the conditions estranged the negro from the only influence which could have saved him—e. g. the former slave owner. It may be, however, that under the guidance of a Wise Providence it will work out right in the end.

“You will please pardon this digression. I wish you could know the facts obtained by actual observation.”

E. W. A.

The author is satisfied that he has now traced out the pedigree of the North Carolina family, which will be found nearly complete. It is a pleasure to introduce them, for though divided for some one hundred and twenty-five years, we find them continuing in the same honest, sturdy way, that all Atwaters have ever lived.

The following letter, accompanied by recent pictures of the ancestral home in England, is self-explanatory:

Mr. Francis Atwater, Meriden, Conn.

My dear Mr. Atwater:—I visited England in 1901 and again in 1902 and on each occasion spent a most delightful day at Lenham. Lenham as you know, is in Kent, on the line of the railway between London and Dover, being perhaps fifty miles southeast of London. Kent is said to be the garden spot of England and the drive from the railway station to Royton Chapel is certainly a most beautiful one. The roads are macadamized so that they are as hard and smooth and clean as a floor and the vegetation seems most luxuriant, the lands being most carefully cultivated. The Chapel is now a part of the estate of the Hon. Akers-Douglas, who is the Home Secretary of Great Britain, being a member of the English Cabinet.

The illustration in the 1901 edition of the genealogy fails to give any conception of the beauty of the old Atwater homestead. It is one of the most charming spots and ideally beautiful old buildings I have ever seen and I succeeded in getting one or two fairly good photographs. The house is one of great interest not only in the neighborhood but through the entire section, being well known to English archaeologists and being famed particularly for its oak. The carving in the oak paneling, pilasters and mantel about the old fireplace being extremely beautiful.

Back of the house the land slopes to a small lake, being the only piece of water in the neighborhood, and from this lake very possibly the family received their name. The whole situation is so ideal and restful, fields so smooth and green, the old house so comfortable that it makes one marvel that Joshua and David Atwater could have ever left such surroundings to go to London and then cross the ocean in a sail boat to finally make their homes in such an inhospitable land as New England was almost 300 years ago.

The house is at least one mile from the village and one can well feel that the village of Lenham possibly has no greater population to-day than it had 300 years ago. The streets, the houses, the very people, all seem to breathe an atmosphere of two or three centuries ago. The original church at Lenham was destroyed by fire in 1399. The present church with its Norman tower was built immediately afterward. The carved oak pulpit in this church, presented in 1622, as a carved date on the sounding board overhead testifies, was given in that year by the Atwaters and Honeywoods, and from this pulpit the Vicar each Sunday still represents the Church of England and preaches to a diminishing flock. The whole neighborhood is so quaint, beautiful and interesting and the Vicar of the church so hospitable that no descendant of David Atwater should ever think of making a trip to England without going down to Lenham and spend at least one day in the country from which his first American ancestor came.

I am much interested in the fact that you are getting out a second volume of the genealogy and am pleased to send you some photographs with films that I took three years ago at the old house in Lenham. I regret that as it was quite cloudy I was unable to get as clear pictures as would otherwise have been the case. For reference, I have numbered each print. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 give views of the house itself and you can readily see it is a beautiful relic of old English architecture. The house is about ninety-five feet across the front and the brick wall shown in No. 3 runs at right angles to the house, enclosing a rectangle that is almost square. These pictures were taken late in the year. Earlier in the summer the top of the wall is a continuous box of flowers flowing down about it on either side. Picture 4 shows in detail the front door with its modern electric bell. This door is solid oak, hand-carved, being one of the best examples in England of what is known as the Folded Linen pattern. No 5 shows the mantel and carved oak work about the fireplace in the main room, which you enter from the front door. The artistic appearance of this fireplace has been ruined by being lined with modern glazed tiles and having set up in it, as you see, a wood stove, with its piece of pipe going up into the chimney.

No. 6 is a door on the right and No. 7 a door on the left of this fireplace opening out of the main room to the laundry in the rear. I also send you two photographs of the pulpit in the old Lenham church which, as you notice by the inscription on the back of one of the pictures, was presented to Lenham church by the Atwaters and Honeywoods in 1622.

WM. C. ATWATER.

The writer spent a pleasant hour with Leonard Atwater, of Westfield, Mass., one Sunday evening in October, 1905. He was then in his eighty-eighth year. His mind had somewhat failed, but he narrated his early experiences in a very interesting manner. When a young man he peddled powder for a nearby mill. He was very successful for those times and made enough in a short while to buy a two-horse team. He then turned his attention to selling whips, the manufacture of which the town of Westfield, Mass., has long been noted. At first he bought his own stock and added a profit to suit himself. Later a manufacturer asked him to work for him on a salary. Mr. Atwater was agreeable, provided the man would buy his team, which he did at a price of $500. This Mr. Atwater put in a building lot and contracted for a house to be built thereon so that he would have a "cage" when he should marry. His salary was $600. He started with a two-horse team load of whips for Ohio where two of his sisters lived. This was in the days of wildcat money when out of some eighty banks in Ohio, all but thirteen failed within a short time. He spent several months in that state but met with no loss from this cause. In one instance he exchanged his "wildcat" money into gold but a few days before the bank failed. There was $1,500 in amount which he carried in a sack in his wagon. It was in his possession only a few days when at a tavern he met a man from the east who had bought a farm but the owner would only accept gold for his pay. The easterner offered Mr. A. two and one-half per cent. if he would take his Philadelphia paper money in exchange for gold. The exchange was made, Mr. A. put the bills in his pocket and that night his wagon was broken into, it being supposed the bag of gold was still there. Mr. Atwater returned to Westfield to become a manufacturer and when he retired from active life had been for several years the president of a large whip company.

PULPIT IN LENHAM (ENG.) CHURCH.

Presented by Atwaters and Honeywoods in 1622.

While on a visit to the St. Louis exhibition the writer learned of the tragic death of Bertram A. Atwater, son of John Bowman (No. 1442), who was an artist of more than ordinary talent. It seems he was engaged to a young lady who lived in East St. Louis. In preparation of his forthcoming marriage he had furnished a house in Chicago, harmonizing the furniture, carpets, walls and decorations as only an educated taste for the beautiful could, when he visited East St. Louis for the purpose of settling with his fiancée upon the happy day. Before reaching the house he was accosted by a small boy who desired to carry his grip. Mr. Atwater, espying a barber shop close at hand, told the urchin if he would wait until he was shaved he could have the job. In the meantime the boy informed his brother and a negro in regard to the stranger. Then he returned and when Mr. Atwater started buoyantly down the street with his helper he was confronted with an order to throw up his hands just as he reached a dark alley, the time being early evening. However instead of complying he immediately reached into his pocket, seized his revolver and fired point blank at the brother who was once of his assailants, the bullet entering his head. In turn the other hold-up shot Mr. Atwater. The shooting aroused the neighborhood, and among those who hastened to the scene was the betrothed young lady and her father, who immediately recognized the victim, but the assassin had accomplished his purpose and death soon resulted. A search was made for the footpads, but without success until groans were heard comin from an obscure quarter, when the wounded brother was discovered. Later, the boy and the negro were arrested. They were tried and as a result the lad was imprisoned, the negro hung, and the wounded assailant sent to state's prison for life. A few years later he was pardoned as it was claimed he could not live long, which proved to be true as he died on the journey before he reached home.

FRANCIS ATWATER.

THE ATWATER ELM

The Atwater Elm can still be seen at the original "plantation" of David Atwater, who came to America in 1636 in "the good ship Hector," and in the "goodly company" of the Rev. John Davenport, Theophilus Eaton and others.

The tree was planted in 1746 by David Atwater, a descendant of the original settler; and on the old plantation at East Farms, now Cedar Hill, New Haven.

The diameter of the tree is fifteen feet. It is estimated the circle of branches near the top is 300 feet. The height is ninety feet. The elm was thirty years of age when the Revolutionary war was declared and must have been a silent witness to many remarkable events. If it could give us tales of the period, it would speak of the ardent patriot David and of his equally patriotic wife, Elizabeth.

Doubtless the tree felt the vibration of the three guns fired at midnight of Sunday, July 4th, 1779, followed by the tramp of men and boys, rushing to the city to resist the "British Invasion."

With them went David, who left his farm, taking with him his "dutch horse and whiffietree, and with several friends went to an armed vessel at the wharf, dismounted one of its six pound guns, and hitching his horse to it, drew it to West Bridge and fired shots at the enemy."

The old tree would tell of the passing of soldiers, weary and discouraged by the hardships of war. It would not fail to recall the fact that "within the space of three weeks, 1,500 soldiers and prisoners, rested in the shade of the elm to partake of the bounty of the worthy and loyal lady, Elizabeth, and her patriotic husband, David Atwater."

This statement was taken from an extract from the sermon by Rev. Chauncey Whittlesey and Rev. Mr. Baird at the funeral of Elizabeth Atwater in 1785.

HARRIET B. ATWATER.

PERSONAL REMINISCENCES

BY GEN. H. B. CARRINGTON, OF HYDE PARK, MASS., AN ATWATER DESCENDANT, DELIVERED AT THE MERIDEN (CONN.) CENTENNIAL, 1906. THEY NOT ONLY RELATE TO HIS ATWATER ANCESTORS, BUT OF OLD CUSTOMS. THEY WILL BE FOUND UNUSUALLY INTERESTING.

My Countrymen—I stand before you to-day as a son of our common mother, Wallingford. Not unlike ancient Zion, she sitteth upon a hill of beauty just over yonder between two summits, east and west, the one "Whirlwind Hill" and the other "Mount Tom." From each summit, at the bright sunrise hour, the opening eye can catch the waters of Long Island Sound, flashing as beautifully before the sight, as when the waters of the great western sea of Hebrew history delighted the outlook from Lebanon or Carmel. Indeed, south of Mount Tom, on the New England range, that separates Wallingford from her other foster-town, Cheshire, known further north as the Green and White Mountains, and with a bold front seaward, which you call Hanging Rock, (with its perpetual "ice house,") and closing with an equally proud frontage to the sea at New Haven, called East Rock, there was a real Mount Carmel, in the town of Hamden, itself deriving its name from that of the "Patriot Hampden" of English history.

I am not here to trace the colonial, revolutionary or progressive lives of our common ancestors up to my own childhood, more than eighty years ago, but to talk familiarly with the grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of those who one hundred years ago left the old eagles' nest to migrate hither and go to housekeeping for themselves directly on the Boston and New York stage route just midway between the twin capitols of God-worshipping and liberty-loving old Connecticut.

That was a transition period of historic significance. The people had lived under and enjoyed the franchises and inherited the same rights and prerogatives inspired by "Magna Charta, that both filled their souls and swelled the sails when they took refuge on this rock-bound coast to escape the exactions of the unchristian and unsympathetic rule of their mother country.

Their lives were, indeed, shapen by the memories of the past rather than by those of the immediate present or its opening future; and yet, the "mother nest" must be vacated that both mother and offspring might have a larger and more independent life. Even in my own childhood there were still living many grand old men and women, who cherished and loved to tell stories of the past, which they in childhood oft heard whilst seated on the knees of the first settlers of New Haven and Plymouth.

The general occupation of the people was that of farming, as was that of the ancient Hebrew; but their lands gradually became too restricted for profitable culture, as generations multiplied through their prolific example.

I must be pardoned a personal reminiscence, much needed to illustrate my thought, as personal reminiscences are what largely prompted your call for my presence to-day. It is one of my earliest memories, and possibly more distinct because being the first death I ever witnessed.

On the 19th day of December, 1831, I stood with my mother by the bedside of one of these grand old men, her grandfather, Captain Caleb Atwater. He was living with his daughter, Mary (widow of Rev. David L. Beebee) while his only son, Joshua, a deacon in the Congregational church and devoted to its support, occupied the old homestead, on the diagonal opposite corner, and conducted its large farming concerns.

On the day referred to, ever active in all home interest, he rode horseback to the North Farms for the family "grist," took cold and peacefully crossed the Silent River, at the age of 91. He was one of these already noticed, full of reminiscences of the past. Many of these, preserved by my mother, were cherished by myself, as among the most valuable lessons of my childhood.

I especially remember finding his old cocked-hat and sword in what was called the "Tow Chamber" and it was said, that, "when Dick" (Richard) Smith, the hired man of Dr. Andrews, used the old sword to cut cornstalks, I expressed the "wish that his own head might be cut off by it," which wicked hope, however, was never realized.

Like so many descendants from early New England stock and their immediate progenitors, his name had been borrowed from the family Bible. This was indeed a biographical encyclopaedia from which the old stock associated children on their birth with the names and places of most ancient Bible history, at a time when many children were esteemed worthy of a divinely promised blessing in the home as of "olive plants around the table."

Indeed, the old family Bible had a special "family record" interpolated between the Old Testament history and its genealogical grouping which introduced the historic era of human life that began 1906 years ago. I emphasize this point to note the fact that this single Atwater surname of old Wallingford experience is prefixed by more than eighty names taken from the Old and New Testament, ranging from Adam down to Titus and Zeanas, which are as follows:

Adam, Aaron, Abel, Abiah, Abigail, Abraham, Ahaz, Amzi, Anna, Asa, Asaph, Bela, Benjamin, Caleb, Cornelia, Damaris, Daniel, Davis, Dorcas, Ebenezer, Eldad, Elias, Elihu, Elisha, Elizabeth, Elnathan, Enos, Ephraim, Esther, Erasmus, Eunice, Ezra, Hiram, Hulda, Ichabod, Ira, Isaac, Jacob, James, Jared, Jehiel, Jeremiah, Jesse, Joanna, John, Jonah, Jonathan, Joseph, Iotham, Levi, Lydia, Martha, Mary, Medad, Merab, Mehitabel, Miriam, Mosses, Naomi, Nathan, Noah, Rachel, Rebecca, Reuben, Rhoda, Ruth, Samuel, Sarah, Seth, Silas, Simeon, Stephen, Thomas, Timothy, Titus and Zeanas. Perhaps without precedent in America's history.

LARGE AND PROMINENT FAMILIES.

More significant is the fact that during six generations of the same stock from the first landing at New Haven.

One family was blessed with fifteen children.

One family was blessed with fourteen children.

Four families were blessed with thirteen children.

Four families were blessed with twelve children.
Seven families were blessed with eleven children.
Seventeen families were blessed with ten children.
Seventeen families were blessed with nine children.
Twenty-three families were blessed with eight children.
Twenty-three families were blessed with seven children.
Sixteen families were blessed with six children.
Families, 114; children, 990; average about eight.

This instance is not an exceptional illustration of the faith of our fathers in the injunctions and covenants of the Almighty Father with Israel and his seed forever.

In addition to farming as an occupation, with easy access to Middletown and its water communication with New York and Hartford by sloop as well as conveniences in the annual capture of Connecticut river shad to be salted for winter's use, there began to develop new branches of mechanical and manufacturing industry. With the addition of railroad facilities at the foot of the hill, corresponding to the Wallingford hill, from its church centers to the plains below, the water-power of the Quinnipiac river and its tributaries began to be utilized and the foundations were laid for its present unrivaled precedence in many honored branches of mechanical product.

Although Meriden itself was almost wholly a farming town, mulberry trees were cultivated on the western plains below the town to feed silk worms from which silk was procured for the manufacture of lustring, a name then given to material from which dresses were made and of which Washington procured enough to make a suit for himself.

Enterprising citizens, however, had stretched out their arms to grapple for both trade and new homes elsewhere for its multiplying offspring; dealing with the West Indies, and even the Mediterranean sea, through New Haven's sea-going craft, and planting prosperous and productive colonies both in central and northern Ohio. The latter was called a "Western Reserve" because set apart by the government to compensate Connecticut for the surrender of her fantastic "Charter limits to the Pacific" long bearing the proud title of New Connecticut, to which as well as to Columbus, Ohio, Wallingford and vicinity contributed from the families of Atwater, Andrews, Cook, Hall, Kelley and Wilcox more than any other New England town.

Although of personal relation, the emigration to Ohio belongs to personal reminiscence, which you have evoked from me, as I also followed Mr. Andrews and Mr. Wilcox, to Columbus, Ohio, in 1848.

Captain Atwater, who initiated the Ohio emigration, was president and manager of the Connecticut Land Company, which he conducted on strict business methods, paying for all individual purchases upon receipt of the deeds therefor, and began at once, to utilize the land for immediate settlement. His son Joshua, and his son-in-law Dr. John Andrews, made personal journeys to Ohio, to locate their lands designating by the name "Atwater," one township, for immediate occupation.

Three of his daughters married in Catskill, respectively, Ira B. Day, Thomas B. Cook, and Apollos Cook. One son of Mr. Day (William) organized the first Seamen's Bethel chapel at Cleveland, Ohio, and a daughter became the wife of Rev. Dr. Aiken, for many years minister in the First Church at Cleveland, Ohio. One daughter married Captain Merrick, of Branford, Conn., and another, Dr. John Andrews, already noticed. Several of the Merrick children subsequently made their homes in Ohio, as well as Dr. Andrews' four children. Sherlock J. Andrews settled at Cleveland, where he served as a member of Congress and Superior Court judge with John A. Foote, from our foster-town Cheshire, as his law partner. The second son, John Whiting, was distinguished as a lawyer at Columbus, Ohio. The third son, William, a farmer, married a daughter of Rev. James Noyes, of Wallingford, and settled at Penfield, O. Dr. Andrews' only daughter, Jane, married John M. Woolsey, who also settled at Cleveland, O., and Dr. Andrews himself, subsequently married another daughter of Rev. Mr. Noyes, and lived in Ohio, and died at an advanced age.

Several sons and daughters of Captain Atwater's only son, Joshua, also found homes in "New Connecticut," both Thomas and Caleb having first lived where the Merricks settled. Two sons and one daughter of John Barker, of Pond Hill, and later, Dr. William Atwater, found their way westward, where another daughter married Dr. Jared Potter Kirtland, who made Ohio the chief center of his large scientific experience and attainment. One daughter married Lieutenant Garret Barry of the Army, who after the Mexican War, made his home still further west at Milwaukee, Wis. Two daughters survive him, and live in Wallingford. One daughter married Dr. Friend Cook, the predecessor of Dr. Harrison, a physician of Wallingford, and Dr. Cook also moved to Ohio. John, who for many years cultivated the home farm, also succeeded him as deacon of the Congregational church. Upon retiring from the farm work, he interested himself in the public schools, dying at an advanced age, leaving one daughter surviving him. He successively married two daughters of Deacon Russell Hall, neither of whom survived him.

Only one son remained permanently in Old Wallingford (Edgar) who as a lawyer exhibited a versatility of strength, eloquence and refined wit, that promised eminence in his profession, had not death prematurely intervened. Three daughters survive him.

Several of the Cooks and Halls moved westward; President Hayes having married at Columbus, Ohio, Miss Platt, a descendant of one of the Cooks, who lived somewhere not far east from Long Hill. President Hayes in vain endeavored to locate its site.

He visited the old Burying Ground, and when he read "In memory of Billious Cook" (the Christian name "Billious" not being rare) quaintly expressed the query, "whether the migration of some of the Cook stock, westward, could in any measure affect the Ohio climate."

Certain it is, that Judge Choate thinks it would be "worth a prize" if some Wallingford antiquarian would discover the origin of the name. One of Wallingford's leading citizens, Mr. Roderick Curtis, famed for his ready repartee, when asked what the middle initial of one Billious C. Cook stood for, promptly replied, "'Bilious Colic' of course."

Phineas B. Wilcox, who lived on the eastern border of Meriden, towards Middletown, married a daughter of Salina Andrews, and with her brother Samuel, moved to Columbus, O. He became distinguished as a jurist, and as one of the founders of the City Common School system. There Mrs. Andrews lived and died at a very advanced age.

Alfred Kelly, from Middletown, also moved to Columbus, became a man of wealth and influence, and was the efficient president of the first railroad built from Cleveland to that city.

TOPOGRAPHY OF WALLINGFORD.

You are so familiar with the topography of our Mother town that I refer to it as a guild in reminiscences of the past.

One Main street extends along a grassy ridge east of the Quinipiac river and the intervening sea-bed, called the Plains, a mile in length. At each end a long but easy slope drops off, the one from the old Todd house near the big elm northward toward your own Meriden, and the other southward from the old Rice Hall house toward North Haven, where it blends with the Plains. This street is crossed at its center by another street (now known as Center street) and extends westward across the Quinipiac river at Humiston's old mill, joins the old Boston and New York stage route, and connects with what was called the "West Farms" and then reaches Cheshire. Its course eastward, crossing Munson's brook below Elm street, leads through the "East Farms," (of which further notice will be taken) to Northford as well as over "Whirl-wind Hill" past Pistepaug Lake (Paug pond) and thence to Middlefield and Durham.

From the main street eastward there was one gradual slope of a few hundred yards to a long meadow valley east of which the whole country gradually rises toward "Whirl-wind Hill" with here and there small streams and narrow valleys intervening.

Along the foot of the first slope from the main street is a parallel street, now known as Elm street, but formerly called Lower street, the present Main street then being distinguished as Upper street. I shall use the old names. At the very center of Upper street was the historic "Town Green" common to all New England towns for public gatherings, especially for the annual "Training Day," "Independence Day," and other rallies of the people in mass; "Menagerie Day" being especially honored.

Midway between the center and the Rice Hall house, (Doctor Rice Hall, his Christian name, as a seventh son being Doctor), a street known as Gravel hill (from its red gravel) ran eastward to Lower street and there blended with that street in its course by the old Edward Hall house (known as the "Dublin District" with its splendid maples) thence to the John Barker place (known as Pond Hill, a little pond of water near by) and thence to Northford and North Haven. This John Barker, the son-in-law of Captain Atwater, was prominent in Masonic orders, and at his decease was buried with full Masonic honors. I remember the event as of yesterday. His family servant was Cato, the last slave owned in the state of Connecticut; and Cato in his two-wheeled donkey cart and "fiddle," always anxiously waited for, was an indispensable factor when at Thanksgivings or at other times the ball room of the Washington Tavern was suitably decorated for an old-fashioned dance.

My sister, Mrs. Gilbert, still remembers that on one Training Day, old Cato rescued her from the onset of the Wallingford Dragoons, when they suddenly turned the Lewis Corner and scattered the children, who were not suspicious of the movement.

Eastward from the foot of Gravel hill crossing Munson's brook, a lane extended to the summit of Long hill from which the entire village appeared as if upon one common level. This hill was topped with slender poplar trees, a land mark for miles around, and chiefly known for its huckleberries, blackberries and snakes.

Midway between the center and the Todd place at the head of Upper street, a street known as Christian street extended eastwardly from the present High school corner across Elm street and Atwater's brook, which finally unites with Munson's brook on Center street, and then crosses a little valley, running up the slope past the old John Weber and Hubbard Jones' places, and forming a most direct route to Old Durham, Middlefield and Middletown.

Elm street continuing northward from its junction with Christian street, extended north eastwardly through the "North Farms" and thus formed another avenue of approach to both Middletown and its cross communications with your Meriden.

The house at the head of the Main street, known as the Todd house, from the family occupying it during my boyhood, should be known properly, as the Royce, or Rice house, having been originally built, perhaps two hundred years ago or more, by James Royce (or Rice) the great great grandfather of Miss Mary L. Rice, the last of the family born in the old mansion, and now a teacher of higher mathematics and history, in the Brooklyn, New York, school system.

From the Todd house to Lower street there was also an open roadway without a house, but on a short lane parallel with it was the house of one, John Beaumont, a world-wide voyager, eccentric in his ways, but especially famous for relics brought from the East Indies, and choice nautical instruments which he had preserved upon return from his last voyage.

From the foot of the road sloping northward from the Todd house toward Meriden there branched another road to Yalesville, named after Charles Yale, where a mill-dam and factory on the Quinnipiac river had long been in use (formerly known as Tyler's). The manufactory products of Mr. Yale had a large market, especially at Richmond, Va., as his son advised me only yesterday. There was also a road on the "Plains" north of the Parker house (hereafter to be mentioned), crossing the Quinnipiac river at Horsford's bridge, and also the Boston and New York turnpike, thence running direct to Cheshire.

The so-called Plains road, running north and south parallel with the Upper street (now your own beautiful "Old Colony street"), had but one substantial residence in its entire length, namely the Parker house, and was rarely used.

Midway between Center and Christian streets, connecting upper and lower streets, was another street named Academy Lane (from the collegiate academy located there).

All the streets mentioned were lined with choice trees, either elm or maple. The trees indicated by its name on Elm street were brought by ox-teams, belonging to Captain Caleb Atwater, from Cheshire, twelve to the cart load.

The maples and elms upon the Main street had been indiscriminately planted as the old settlers established their homes; but about sixty years ago an "Ornamental Tree Society" was organized by sons of Jared Whittlesey, Edgar Atwater, Ives Martin, John Butler and Horace Austin, of Whirl-wind hill, for the systematic planting of standard trees throughout the village, which has so greatly enhanced its present beauty. It was my privilege to be an active member of said society, and assist, during school and college vacations.

BUILDINGS AND ACCESSORIES.

Time will not permit mention in detail of all houses then standing, many of which have disappeared or have been remodeled.

Between the Todd house and Christian street were those of Todd, Parker, Hubbard, Jones, Parmelee, Hough and Culver.

Between Christian and Center streets were those of Peck, Elijah Beaumont, Dr. Parker, S. Yale, Adna Hall, John Hiddleston, Hinssdale Ives, the Baptist church, Orrin Andrews, Morse (afterwards the Moses Beach property), Buel, Friend Cook, afterwards Dr. Harrison, the Episcopal church, L. Carrington's widow and store and house of Deacon Almer Hall.

Southward from Center street were the Congregational church, the old tavern opposite, and the houses of Whittlesey, Congregational parsonage, previously owned by Merrick Cook, Rev. James Noyes, Mrs. Beadles, Widow Thompson, Roxanna Hall, Eli Ives, Carriage Maker Thompson, Augustus Hall, Mrs. Doolittle, Randall Cook, afterwards Beverly Hall, Elizur Hall, Joseph Hyatt Hall and Mrs. Foote, Pomeroy, and Rice Hall at the foot of the street.

On Center street, Deacon Cannon, James Carrington's house and store, Masonic hall and the old Washington tavern (named from Washington's visit at Jeremiah Carrington's tavern, on the 19th of October, 1789, the eighth anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis). Going eastward from Elm street were the house and carriage shop of Chauncey Munson, and the factories of Pomeroy, Elihu Hall and Carrington.

On Christian street were the houses of Judge (Esquire) Reynolds, replaced by one of the "Choate school buildings," and opposite, the double "gable-roof once that of Squire Stanley," but occupied by Rev. William Curtis, rector of the Episcopal church, a brother of Roderick Curtis, Esq., and at present by the Atwater sisters and Mrs. Manning, all sisters and daughters of Edgar Atwater, deceased.

The old family mansion of Captain Atwater on the northeast corner, now occupied by Judge William Choate, who married a great-granddaughter of the original owner, retains its chief ancient features, the immense fireplace included, but otherwise modified for modern convenience, and the old Atwater store, dismantled within my memory, but adapted for dwelling purposes, has been occupied by Dr. Huntington Atwater, who is associated in the management of the Choate school. On the diagonal corner the residence of Captain Atwater at the time of his death, and then occupied by his daughter Mary, widow of the Rev. David Lewis Beebee, is still occupied by her granddaughter, the widow of Rev. E. R. Gilbert.

In view across the Atwater brook were the houses of Hubbard Jones and John Weber, the latter long since destroyed. Adjoining Mrs. Gilbert's on Elm street is the house once occupied by Dr. John Andrews (who married a daughter of Captain Atwater), but sold the same to Roderick Curtis, of New York, who became a prominent man in church and all other town interests, and whose surviving daughter, Miss F. J. Curtis, occupies it.

To the northward on Elm street, the house of John Ives has been purchased and removed by Judge Choate, but the Mix house and one other still remain substantially as of old. The remaining houses on Elm street southward, of old time recollection as far as the foot of Gravel hill, were Marcus Iscariot (torn down when purchased by Mr. Curtis) and those of Randall Cook, Jeremiah Hall, Medad Munson, Sarah Hall and Constant Kirtland.

CHURCHES.

The churches were three in number, Congregational, Episcopal and Baptist, each of which occupied the site of those now in use.

The Congregational edifice preceding the one now in use was built by James Carrington as architect, and its successive ministers were the Rev. James Noyes, who occupied the pulpit during my boyhood, and for more than forty years; followed by the Rev. Edward R. Gilbert, a trustee of Yale college, who also occupied the pulpit for more than forty years.

The earlier church edifice of this society, so-called a "Three Decker"—after the "Man-of-war" fashion, because of its two galleries—had the old-fashioned square pews of early times. When the second church was torn down for the erection of the present edifice, and the great "rooster" weather vane was removed, it was found to have been swiveled up in a rifle-barrel, which the architect, my grandfather, James Carrington, brought from the Whitneyville Rifle Works, where he was superintendent, and associated with Eli Whitney, in the manufacture of rifles for the government. It was only yesterday, Marcus Cook, surviving son of Hiram Cook, asked me, "what has become of that old rifle barrel" and reminded me that he was the boy who climbed the old steeple, fastened a rope around the spire, sawed the vertical timbers as he descended to boss the big pull that brought the spire to the ground.

The Episcopal church preceding the handsome stone edifice was a frame structure and burned in 1867. The previous edifice was a square building without a steeple, with entrances from three sides, and old-fashioned square pews. A pulpit was ascended on each side by a spiral stair-case, and hooded over with an umbrella-like canopy called the "sounding board." During Christmas week it was elaborately decorated with evergreens.

Close by the old Congregational and Episcopal churches were horse-sheds and small houses, called "Sabaday" or Sabbath houses to shelter teams that came in from the various farms, and to furnish fire conveniences to the church attendants for filling their foot-stoves with live coals, and brewing tea which they brought for their luncheon at the noon recess, between morning and afternoon service.

The Baptist church preceding the present edifice, was a plain structure without a steeple. Its minister, at my earliest recollection, was Rev. Mr. Hawley, the father of Gen. Hawley, then a student at the academy, as previously noted. A previous church, the ruins of which I remember, was located on the corner of the lot at present occupied by the Wallingford High school, and was known historically as the Wells church with rather indefinite authority.

SCHOOLS.

The schools of Wallingford were specified by districts. Those of the village were called the North and South districts, the others, the "North Farm," "East Farm" and "West Farm" districts.

The North district school was just above the old Aaron Andrews homestead, afterwards occupied by Sheriff Leander Parmelee, whose house was destroyed by the Wallingford tornado in 1878.

The South district school was just south of the Van Cleve house on the west side of South Main street, in which house I was born in 1824. This was occupied for many years by Randall Cook, a leading Democrat, who then lived at the old house recently occupied by Beverly Hall, deceased.

At one time in the "Lower" school house a writing school was conducted; otherwise only the common English branches were taught in these schools.

The Wallingford Academy, so-called, occupied the only building upon a short street (called Academy lane) connecting Main and Elm streets (then called Upper and Lower streets). This academy taught the higher branches, preparatory for entrance to college, but its support failed and its site was occupied afterwards by the Dutton family. The last surviving pupil of this academy was General and United States Senator Joseph R. Hawley, lately deceased. At the foot of the slope toward Elm street was a large barn owned by Jeremiah Hall. This barn was one of the wonders of Wallingford. Conversation, shouts, song and whistling echoed with intense distinctness by night or day, to the intense amusement and enjoyment of the happy performers. The unsightly barn has disappeared, but some of the echoes still live in fancy's ear.

In contrast with the failure of the academy as a school for young men, a young ladies' school was maintained for years with rare success and excellence by Miss Sarah P. Carrington (recently deceased, past ninety years of age), the granddaughter of Captain Jeremiah Carrington.

Her grace, refinement and culture were honored by the public as much as she was endeared to all under her charge; and her efficiency in church work was as effective and deserving of tribute as were other excellencies of her noble character.

She was the daughter of my great uncle, Dr. Liverius Carrington, and had preserved with great care and pride, for more than two generations, an old yellow paper, upon which was the following memorandum: "When General Washington left the town for Middletown, and grandmother expressed her regret that she had not longer time to prepare for his visit, he kindly answered, 'my entertainment has been more than I could expect, but madam, your gracious manner would make any entertainment most delightful.'"

Of my own early school days, I remember little more than benches without backs, playing soldier, nutting, fishing, a passion for drawing, some knack in kniving wood into odd shapes, and keeping a crude diary. Its chief event took record in 1835, when a pupil at the Manual Labor Boarding school of Rev. Goodman and Dr. Hudson, of Torrington, Conn. (noted Abolitionists), where Rev. Horace Day, late of New Haven, deceased, was my first teacher of Latin and Greek.

I still have the names of all the pupils, long since deceased, but a single event, as recorded by Mr. Day gave tone to my political convictions, that never abates. This school was visited one day by an Abolitionist from the adjoining town of New Hartford by the name of John Brown, who talked upon the African slave trade and its horrors with such force as to exact from some of the boys a pledge ever after to hate slavery. His "soul is marching on!"

Later study at the Hart and Porter Boarding school at Farmington, Conn., introduced my college course, with intermediate vacations, at my old home, but all the adult or companion contemporaries, many of them but vaguely remembered, have passed away.

HOUSES AND FURNISHINGS.

With the exception of two large gambrel-roofed houses, such as are still numerous in Old Salem, Massachusetts, of which the old Noyes house is an example, though modified in front, and four single story houses of the same general type still standing; all the large family houses in town and on the farms were of the same general pattern. They were of two stories, with a high roof falling back at the rear to a single story and the connecting kitchen, each one able to accommodate a large family with trundle bed accessories for the little folks.

From a central hall, just large enough for a small table and a winding stairway to the upper story, there were left a parlor on the right of the hall, a family bed room on the left, and in their rear a large "keeping room" for the family, with a small bed room at each end for old folks, or young children. All the larger rooms were wainscotted and paneled in wood, often quite elaborately. Corresponding rooms were above; while the attic had its depository for tow and flax for domestic manufacturing, a spinning wheel, reel, quilting frames, and a loom, if it were not in a piazza or shed connected with the wood-house at the rear or side of the kitchen.

A great oven that would bake pies, cake or bread by dozens at a time, and a fireplace that would take in a back-log of four feet and other wood to match, were essentials to every house. The andirons, shovel and tongs, the bellows and a hinged box for kindlings and wood were always in place, and on the high mantel over each smaller fireplace, there rested the dipped tallow candle, with snuffers, flint and tinder, ready for use.

A spare chamber for guests had its high post mahogany bedstead, with valences or curtains of domestic make to cover the trundle bed when it was hid from sight. For winter's protection against extreme cold a "down comfort" was supplemented by a long handled warming pan, to be filled with coals and put to a half scorching use between the sheets before rest was sought at night.

The invariable well with its old-fashioned sweep, was everywhere conspicuous and a three-forked hook was near at hand with which to fish for the bucket when it broke loose and went to the bottom. The well, itself, was the family refrigerator, and, when no spring house was near, the butter, cream and fresh meat, suspended by a piece of bed-cord or clothes line, let the precious objects of care down to the water's surface for their preservation and safety.

"Quilting bees" were common, and the domestic manufacture of carpets and of lace, as well as embroidery, were trophies of domestic skill that rivaled in beauty and durability the more costly products of foreign loom or manufacture.

Of these domestic manufactures too much cannot be said.

Indeed, both gentlemen and ladies were adepts in the preservation and renewal of the best styles of colonial personal adornment, and on gala days or night assemblies, the lace caps, collars and cuffs which adorned the fair sex, were rivalled in conspicuous smartness and good taste by the silver knee and shoe buckles of their gallants, of all ages, who were as courtly on such occasions as they were systematically industrious, frugal and yet prosperous, in farming and manufacture. The high heels of the white satin shoes of the ladies were as striking as the top boots of the gentlemen, and even the night caps imitated in a small measure the bountiful lace adornment of such dress-caps as were worn at all high social entertainments.

Two specialties of head-covering are not to be ignored, because simple and useful, and as cunning as they were simple and useful. The girls, spinsters included, had their peek-a-boo "sunbonnets" with long neck-protecting capes, and an extension frontward, in a little stovepipe gallery, where they could whisper, regardless of sex, and not disclose to the outsider whether their lips actually touched during the confidential interview. Another apology for a "bonnet" folded backwards like a carriage-top, at a quick toss of the fingers backward, appropriately called the "Calach" and by a handy tape in front could be quickly brought forward to screen the observer, or the observed, as its owner (perhaps I should say, its occupant) wished to be recognized or not.

None of these adornments, however, were more becoming or enjoyable, than the Linsey-Woolsey skirts, linen aprons and pretty kerchiefs when worn in the kitchen's sphere of duty.

The churn and cheese press were the con-comitants of every well furnished kitchen or pantry, and about the back door as well as in the spacious barnyard near by, turkeys, geese, chickens, ducks, pea-hens and rabbits enjoyed life at the will of their mistress.

FARMING AND ITS ACCESSORIES.

Wallingford farmers generally were of a high order of intellectual and social merit, as well as loyal to church opportunity and influence.

Their barns were spacious buildings of two stories, with a large entrance that would admit hay-loads of more than a ton; with storage mows reaching to the roof; with the lower story on one or both sides arranged for stock, bins for grain, and cupboards for harness, yokes and all manner of farming utensils. Water was always at hand; stock was cared for with patient and unremitting labor, largely raising their own, though quick to improve its brood from better.

Their labor was so well systematized that it was no loss of time but stimulus to a fresh week of industry, to take their families in their comfortable wagons or carriages and attend church regularly on the Sabbath. This brought them to the post-office, and many social reunions with friends in the village.

Horses were not used for heavy draught, but oxen only, which were kept in prime condition, and competitive tests for proffered prizes were anticipated with great pride and ambition as to the result.

Their relations with each other were fraternal and cordial. If a new barn or house were to be raised or moved, it was not unusual to find enough volunteers to put up a large frame in one, or at most three days, ready for the roof, and, in moving days, it was not rare to find two 'strings' of teams of twenty and even forty yoke at hand for the purpose. The boss was master of his business, and the men were so distributed that not a roller lost its place. The first start was attended by shouts to teams, and the swing of the long whips was effected with as much precision as that of a light battery in motion.

Thanks to their superior women and bright girls of their own blood, all the details of kitchen and pantry and the machinery of churn and cheese-press, as well as of wash-board, were admirably adjusted for the best results; and while the men were marketing their farm produce, the butter, eggs, cheese and poultry of the mother's care always commanded the highest market price.

It was really a day of recreation as well as of fatigue when the weekly or monthly ride to the New Haven market gave the opportunity not only to trade, but to visit the capitol of the state. The turkeys, eggs, chickens, guinea-pigs and ducks were their special charge, and not unseldom the pea-cock proudly strutted about the poultry yard, as highly prized as a choice new rose would be by the girls who cared for the garden. The cider mill and the cider cheese press were indispensable adjuncts to every farm house.

WALLINGFORD AS IT WAS.

The farm products were generally hay, rye, oats, buckwheat, turnips, potatoes, carrots, squash, artichokes, corn and pumpkins.

Soon after the corn was dry in the shacks there followed night entertainments when the young men and maidens had their "husking bees." By the slim blazing of dipped candles, safely placed in a large apple or turnip, and to be snuffed with the fingers, there began the jolly sport of eager watching for the red ears. Then mid laughter and no little blushing, the standard prize or penalty that fell to the possessor evolved shouts of applause or derision and suspicious guesses as to the future lot of both young man and maiden who took a prize or suffered the penalty.

Of course every farm whether attached to the village or elsewhere had its apple, pear, and peach orchards, as well as its quince and apricot, hop vines and asparagus beds. Smaller fruits as well as vegetable and flowers, belonged to the "family garden" and were especially under the mother's care.

POWER, FACTORIES, INVENTION.

Wallingford center was so remote from the river where Huminston had built his successful mill, that nearer avenues of waterpower became a matter of necessity as well as of economy. Just over the hill, eastward on Christian street, there was a valley and quite a powerful stream (known as George Cook's brook). At its crossing the road to Durham, a dam was built by Leander Parmelee, where he erected a small factory. This stream continued through the same valley, southward, and made a turn westward just as it reached the extension of Center street to the east. At this point James Carrington erected a heavy dam and built a factory. The "escape water" from this dam formed the Munson brook, which at Center street was joined by the Atwater brook, before noticed.

To substitute mechanical means in the place of the old mortar and pestle for family use in grinding coffee and spices, Mr. Carrington invented and for a long time manufactured under his patent the first hand coffee and spice mill ever fabricated.

From the waste water from this dam, the Pomeroy brothers manufactured buttons, razor-straps, gimblets and other useful articles, and Elihu Hall erected a factory for Japanned ware, wooden bowls and wagon-fittings.

Mr. Carrington also rented the Parmelee factory, before noticed, where he manufactured from mahogany the first parallel "rulers" ever invented.

On the North Farms at the original source of the water supply, that successively filled the Parmelee and Carrington ponds, Mr. William Hill also erected a dam and factory for manufacturing purposes. Among his specialties were boxwood combs, both single and folding combs. Harvey S. Hall made wagon-poles, whiffletrees, etc. The Wallaces, since becoming famous in their silver manufacture, on the Quinnipiac river, made beginnings with metallic spoons of German silver, in 1835.

Friction matches were also made on the North Farms, variously known among us either as "brimstone matches" or "Lucifer matches." Nathan Fenn, a specialist, commended his original packages by this brilliant effusion. "Nathan Fenn's matches are all very good. They are made of brimstone, phosporous and wood." It cannot be questioned that more light has been struck through this Wallingford invention than from any other sources, except those that are either solar or through electricity.

At the head of the Atwater brook, just beyond the old Ives house, north of Christian street, the same Parmelee built a dam and a factory to be rented for various uses. Not long after this, Edgar Atwater erected a dam and factory two miles below the Hummiston mill on the Quinnipiac river. This mill was at the head of tidewater, and a long time ago small sloops and schooners were built there and floated to Fair Haven for complete equipment. Such, at least, is matter of tradition, not of individual recollection.

These business ventures gave employment to many young men and afforded to Wallingford a valuable export trade and laid the foundation for other developments, which in the case of the Carrington pond, finally resulted in the immense establishment of silverware of Simpson & Company, with a market world-wide of its enduring success. The Wallaces also after the introduction of steam, engaged in the silverware business near the river, and the present extensive establishments erected on the old "Plains" testify to the wisdom and sagacity of those who substituted manufacture for worn-out farming in good old Wallingford.

WALLINGFORD INDEPENDENT.

A crowning element of the stability and growth of Wallingford was its practical independence of the outside world for its own mechanical necessities. The stores of Carrington & Kirtland, Jared Lewis, Almer Hall, and Captain Atwater, were first-class for the period, and dry goods, hardware groceries, farm and garden implements as well as cheap candies, cocoanuts and peanuts were always kept in good supply. Drugs of all kinds, fluid, solid or dried herbs and pills together with ball liquorice and stick liquorice and a few candles were kept by Dr. Barker, Dr. Friend Cook and Dr. Harrison, his successor, at their home offices.

The Atwater store which was dismantled within my recollection and converted into a residence for his son John who succeeded to the practical management of his large farm, was peculiar in its supplies. It was close by the homestead at the corner of Christian and Elm streets. A business with the West Indies and with Mediterranean ports demanded the erection of a large barn near by, called the "Potash" and potash, saltpeter, charcoal, lime and similar products were its sole deposits.

From these the materials for powder were procured for Washington's army while at Newport, and the store itself had a large trade with Durham and other towns east and northeast of Wallingford.

Three large wagon, cart and carriage shops, that were really factories, viz., those of Munson, Beadles and Thompson, so thoroughly made, painted and finished their products, that their owners commanded markets beyond the town limits. For leatherbelting, or shoe fittings required by its shoemakers or ordinary cobblers, there was little need to go even to New Haven, except for Morocco and some fancy leather. The tannery of Medad Munson was on a large scale, and also commanded other than home patronage. The Ward Brothers at the northwest corner of Main street and Gravel Hill, were not only hatters and carpet weavers, but manufacturers of pewter coffee and teapots, and for want of water power, used what was called sweep-power. The track upon which the horse in his circuit developed this power soon went to grass, spoiling the fun of rude boys, who used birch stimulants when the old horse became too lazy.

The autumn hog and beef killing not only supplied the farmers' cellars with its beef and hams fresh from the smoke house, but a surplus for others who did not kill stock of their own, so that it was a long time before Jeremiah Hall set in motion his butchering and meat deliveries that finally made a meat market a necessity in the town.

Most families kept pigs, which fed from troughs of their own, and the dipping of tallow candles was as common in the homes as the preparation of the sausage for the winter's use.

At the spring "shad haul" on the Connecticut, a supply was procured to be salted for winter's use, and great bins of potatoes in everybody's cellar together with other garden vegetables, carefully cultivated in garden patches, were adequate for almost town necessities.

For everything raised beyond the town needs, New Haven was a ready market, and for a series of years the poor house of Wallingford, was peopled by few who needed its assistance or self-support.

BOOKS AND EDUCATIONAL CULTURE.

I would, indeed, be wanting in appreciation of "Wallingford as it was" and has been, if I failed to make mention of the fact that her close relation to New Haven, as well as to Hartford and Middletown, made for the families of the Congregational, Episcopal and Baptist churches welcome resorts for the education of her youth, which abundantly supplied the place, and made unnecessary the academy once started in their midst. The preparatory schools for higher education at the colleges of the respective denominations at those places, and the Episcopal school at Cheshire, were of easy and frequent access, and Yale college not only was represented at Wallingford for more than a century by a member of her board of trustees (called fellows), but Wallingford young men, even within my memory, took the valedictory at Yale, as well as one at Princeton, and several of her sons became most distinguished lawyers, judges, bankers and educators west of the Alleghanies.

By the side of the fireplace in nearly every homestead was a book cupboard. Standard commentaries upon the Bible, suited to each church connection were there. The "Pilgrims' Progress" and standard works of all kinds with a good English dictionary were there. Of clean fiction the "Scottish Chiefs" and "Thaddeus of Warsaw" were favorites, as well as Scott's work when they appeared. Robinson Crusoe and the Arabian Nights and "Mother Goose" and other literature were there, all of which was in good English vernacular, fitted to teach the language and stimulate thought. And not least of all, as an auxiliary was the fact that "hired man" or "family help" when needed in the kitchen, could read the English language and speak it correctly.

GENEALOGY AND HISTORY.

FIRST GENERATION.

1. David Atwater, son of Thomas and Susan Narsen, baptized in Lenham church October 8, 1615. He was born in Royton in Lenham, England, and in the month in which he became twenty-one years of age, October, 1636, his father died, and his mother died scarcely more than two months later,—in January, 1637. In less than six months from the latter event, June 26, 1637, the brothers, Joshua and David, with their sister Ann, arrived in Boston. It cannot be doubted that their arrangements for removal, so hastily made at that time of general discontent and apprehension in church and state affairs, involved large pecuniary sacrifices.

It is seen that David was in his twenty-second year when he came to New England in 1637. If he was one of those who accompanied Mr. Eaton to Quinnipiack in the autumn of that year, he returned to Boston, for only seven of the company, of whom Joshua was one, remained at Quinnipiack. It may be believed that David and his sister Ann, remaining in Boston that winter, sailed with the company for their new home in the spring of 1638. He signed the plantation covenant June 4, 1639, the day of the meeting of the constituent assembly in Mr. Newman's barn, which was the commencement or foundation of the Colony of New Haven.

He was unmarried previous to 1643, when he appears alone on the list of planters, with a valuation upon his estate of £500, "according to which he will pay his proportion in all Rates and Public charges from time to time to be assessed for civil uses, and expeet Lands in all divisions which shall generally be made to the planters." He was one of twenty-nine whose estates were on the list at £500 or more.

He married Damaris Sayre, daughter of Thomas Sayre, of Southampton, L. I., before March 10, 1646-7, the date of the General Court, when the name of "David Atwater's wife" was read among those seated in the meeting-house. She died April 7, 1691. Upon the union of the New Haven and Connecticut Colonies, consummated at a General Court held at Hartford, May 11, 1665, David Atwater was the first of the New Haven Colony who was sworn a freeman of the united colony. Francis Atwater, Esq.:

Meriden, Conn.

Dear Sir:—Jacob Atwater and family have a well-filled place in your Atwater History. I would have used some of its records (with your consent) in my Colonial History, if access to it was known, while looking for such material. I have a photo of the old Bradley House there. The Bradley boys (4) and two girls were schoolmates with me. They all left the old home which has become sadly demoralized in looks and thrift. Quite a romance now hangs over the place. Fenn became owner of the farm and built a new house. He had some money acquired in manufacture. For many years Fenn has lived there alone—his wife died and children left him. He died last August or about that time, having been injured by a passing train of cars. His estate is valued at more than $10,000, much invested funds. The farm is a wreck. $800 or more in cash has been found secreted in small sums about the house and barn. Forty pocketbooks, most of them containing money, were scattered about. Some of the money was tucked away behind barrels in the cellar. The place has become one of Connecticut's abandoned farms with even $10,000 in possession. When in possession of Jacob Atwater prosperity must have smiled there, and a son graduated from Yale, Rev. Jason Atwater.

Very briefly yours,

J. H. DICKERMAN.

I writ these lines to my daughter Lydia at Newhaven, and after our love and respects to you, I would inform you that we are all in a considerable state of health as I hope these lines will find you and yours, and whereas we are informed that you are about to enter into the marig covenant again, and as you have sent to us to know our minds, we take it well, and as to the man we hear you are agoing to have, we have been formerly well acquainted with him and we have reason to respect him well. So that no objection ariseth there, and as for your circumstances in the world you know them much better than we doe, and herefore we are willing to leave the mater with you, hoping you may be directed to that which may be more for your comfort, and notwithstanding what I have written above, you may understand your mother and I both to be under the infirmities of old age, and I have nothing further to add at present, but we remain your friends and father and mother. Caleb Atwater. Lydia Atwater."

Of Timothy it is related during the invasion of New Haven by the British July 5, 1779, was a member of a military company in New Haven. He had gone out early in the morning to work in a field somewhere in the region of Hillhouse avenue. Hearing the alarm guns he started to return to town. On the road he met a woman whom he knew hurrying out of town with a cat in her arms. Calling her by name he said, "What is the matter?" She cried out that the enemy were coming. "But where are your children?" "Why at home, I suppose," was her reply. "Well," said Mr. Atwater, "hadn't you better go back and get them and leave the cat?" "Perhaps I had," she answered and went back. After the enemy got possession of the town Mr. Atwater's house was entered among others by them. A soldier who went in, finding some of the females of the family, attempted to kiss one of them, but being resisted withdrew from his undertaking. Another, who had a long, straight sword, probably that of a sergeant, went down into the cellar and thrust it several times into the pork barrel till he succeeded in transfixing some pieces of pork, when he went off with his prize.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 21, 1904.

Mr. Francis Atwater,

Dear Sir: I have your letter of the 18th, regarding Mr. Reuben Attwater. I had read the printed article you sent before, and there must be either a mistake in that or in your letter. According to the book, he died after 1858; according to your letter he died in 1831. You ask whether our probate records go as far back as 1831. The official records of this county go back to 1796, but I have copies of records pertaining to the county that go back to 1701. The British records, of which I also have copies, commence at 1760.

Mr. Attwater did not die in Detroit. He came here either in 1805 or shortly after, as secretary to Gov. Wm. Hull—that is, secretary of the territory. He remained here until 1812, and apparently left before Detroit was taken by the British.

I do not think he was a prisoner, and my reason for so thinking is, that in 1814, William Woodbridge was appointed secretary in his place, and Attwater called upon Pres. Madison, and told him that he was willing to return to Detroit, and wanted to know why he had been superseded. Mr. Madison told him that there should have been no necessity for him returning to Detroit, as he had never been ordered to leave that place. This piece of information is contained in a letter in my possession, written at that time by a member of Congress from Ohio, who had been instrumental in getting Woodbridge appointed, and I have no doubt that the story came from Madison himself. I have a good many papers, official and unofficial, in my collections, signed by Mr. Attwater. I presume I could write a fairly good sketch of his life from such information as I possess. I think I have seen a sketch somewhere, but I do not now recall where. It is a matter of no great importance to me just at this time, but I was looking over his old correspondence regarding Woodbridge and Cass, and Meigs and McArthur and I found it very interesting and took a few items out of it for an address, which I expect to deliver in a few days in this city.

If you should run across any details regarding his life, I will be glad to have them.

Respectfully yours,

C. M. BURTON.

He was the earliest historian of Ohio; had a national reputation. His life was long and included many vocations—minister, lawyer, educator, business man, legislator, Indian commissioner, author and antiquarian. He was a direct descendant of David Atwater, one of the wealthiest of the original settlers who founded New Haven, in 1638, and these were among the most reputable and affluent of all the body of colonists in America. All of that old New England stock is nearly related. Almost the entire emigration was in fourteen years, from 1638 to 1652, when 20,000 people in all came over. After that they came simply as snow flurries after a storm. These 20,000 married young and had large families, often a dozen children each, so that at the beginning of this century they had increased to over a million. The result is, as genealogists ascertain, all are about in some degree of cousinship to the rest.

Caleb Atwater was born on Christmas day, 1778, at North Adams, Massachusetts, was educated at Williams College where he took the highest honors ever awarded, receiving both degrees of A. B. and A. M., upon commencement day. He had charge of a young ladies' seminary in New York City and at the same time studied theology, was ordained a Presbyterian minister, married Miss Diana Lawrence of the celebrated Lawrence stock, by whom he had a daughter, who died in infancy. His wife quickly followed her offspring and was deeply lamented. Later, Rev. Mr. Atwater studied law, having left the ministry on account of ill health, was admitted to the bar and married again—a Miss Belinda Butler, of Pompey, New York, daughter of Judge Butler. He then went into business and not succeeding to his satisfaction went west and established himself in Circleville in 1815. He resumed the practice of law, was sent to the Ohio legislature where he championed the cause of the common school and framed the first statute upon the subject passed by the commonwealth. He was also one of the original minority to advocate the introduction of canals and when finally the first one was opened he accompanied Gov. DeWitt Clinton, of New York, upon a triumphal tour throughout the state, as a tribute to the interest of the former in such projects elsewhere. At the close of his legislative duties he was sent by President Jackson as commissioner to the Winnebago Indians and other tribes, at Galena, Illinois and Prairie du Chien.

He early turned his attention to authorship, and his first book grew out of his coming to a town which was built around a circle, laid out by the mound builders. They had arranged their dwellings around it as a nucleus, put their Temple of Justice i. e. the Pickaway County Court House in the center, and radiated their streets from the circumference. Thus becoming interested in Archaeology he issued his "Archaeologia Americana upon Western Antiquities." This work attracted great attention from foreign savants and he was elected to membership in the principal scientific societies of Europe. His fame also as an original investigator upon such lines was widely conceded in this land. Later he published "A Tour to Prairie du Chien," "Washington," "An Essay on Education," "Writings of Caleb Atwater," and in 1838, his celebrated "History of Ohio."

He was a man of marked physique—heavily moulded, with dark eyes and complexion and a Roman nose—characteristics of the Atwater personality. He was a wonderful talker and had an encyclopaedic mind. He was said to be informed to the least detail upon every known subject. He was the associate of the first men of Ohio and the country. His friendship was greatly valued and his power in epigrammatic speech made his comments notable. A theme upon which he often dilated was his visits to President Jackson, both at the Hermitage, and also at the White House. He exercised a remarkable influence upon the thought of his time. He died in Circleville March 16, 1867, aged 89 years, universally lamented and was buried in Forest cemetery, which overlooks the city of his regard. He had a large family who have represented his traits of versatility and accurate scholarship in many walks of life.

The following letter is from John to his sister Abigail in 1831, showing how great the distances seemed and the chance methods of sending mail, it being sent from Genoa, N. Y., to Hamden, Conn.

DEAR SISTER: Although I have long been absent from you, I have not forgotten you. I should be glad to see you, but it is not probable that we shall ever meet again in this world, for the combined infirmities of age will compel both you and me to remain near our dwellings, and to retire from the business of life.

My health is as good as I could expect, and I fondly hope that you are enjoying the same blessing, and may you continue to enjoy blessings, both temporal and spiritual, the few remaining days you have to spend here on earth.

My family are in usual health. Our sisters Sally and Susan are well. Susau's son Jason is sick; it is not probable that he will survive but a few days. It would be pleasing to me to see you, but I suppose that your advanced age will prevent you from undertaking so great a journey; and it is not probable that I shall ever be able to visit you. Brother Caleb's son Jesse is dead. He died about three weeks ago from a fit of apoplexy. He had been from home on business, and had returned with one of his neighbors, with whom he proposed to tarry during the night.

He accordingly seated himself before the fire, and soon after fell from his chair dead.

I expect to send this by Mr. Timothy Goodyear. He will tell you more about our friends than I have time to write. Mrs. Atwater wishes to be remembered to you. Give my best respects to Mr. Foot and wife. My Susan sends her compliments to you all. I should be glad to hear from you often. Write by bearer of this if you can.

I still remain your affectionate brother,

JOHN ATWATER.

In accordance with said bequest, the executors paid over to the said trustees the sum of $21,254.03, which is the amount of the "Atwater Fund," the income of which is now credited to the town of Hamden on the insane poor account. As a man and a citizen he was held in high regard, and great esteem by his associates. Mr. Atwater was a member of the Humphrey street Congregational church. He gave the entire lot for the church edifice and donated about one-fourth of the entire expense of construction of the church. Upon his death he left a permanent fund for the support of the church to which he belonged and ardently loved. He was a cheerful giver, and in sympathy with all good works.

435. Joshua, son of Jared, twin with David, m. Sept. 19, 1830, Doreas Bronson. He d. July 30, 1840. She was born January 5, 1807, in New Haven county, about eighteen miles from the city, on a farm, going into the city a few years before her marriage. They remained there until the spring of 1832, when Mr. Atwater removed to Massillon, Ohio, then considered way out West. Two months later Mrs. Atwater started, going all the way by water from Albany to Buffalo. She went on the last boat that ran until after the cholera scare, the boat being "tied up" at Buffalo. Her husband met her there and as the boat was several hours late, his anxiety about his wife and infant son can well be imagined. They crossed the lake to Cleveland, and thence in a canal boat to Massillon, then in its infancy, with but few scattered houses. In 1840 Mr. Atwater died, leaving her with four little children, an infant daughter having died one week before. When her son-in-law, Jacob L. Baetel, died in 1879, she went to live with her daughter, where she remained until her death March 1, 1903. Mrs. Atwater became a member of the Methodist church in 1842 and for many years was an active working member, and later on a living example of patiently waiting for the Master's call. She had a sweet, amiable temper, cheerful disposition, industrious to an unusual degree and will always be remembered as sitting plying her needle, with which she was very expert; had an excellent constitution, rarely ever sick, has said she was not sick a day for over thirty years. Up to her ninety-second year she was in full possession of all her faculties except a slight deafness and so companionable that the bond of union between her daughter and herself was more than that of mother and daughter. It was that of confidential friends.

442. Enos, son of Asaph, m. 1811, Elizabeth Bentley, of Kingston, Ontario, Canada.

Mr. Francis Atwater:

DEAR SIR: On page 190 of the first volume Atwater History, you refer to Enos Atwater as marrying Elizabeth Bentley, of Kingston, Ontario, Canada. Enos Atwater and Elizabeth Bentley, his wife, were my grandfather and grandmother. They had three boys and seven girls, the names of which I give you herewith: Lucinda, eldest, was born at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, 1811. She married James McCarroll, a farmer near Kingston. I know nothing of her family. I understand that she did not live to be old. The next child was Susan, born 1812, married Solomon B. Williams, afterwards moved near Ashtabula, Ohio; the third daughter was Barbara, born 1814, married Henry Dudley, of near Ashtabula, Ohio; then there was a son, Ulysses, born 1816. He was raised near Ashtabula, Ohio, and resided there all his life. He had four wives, one of them now surviving him. He was accidentally killed by an express train while crossing the track near his home, about 1900 or 1901. Myron was born 1818 near Ashtabula, Ohio, moved to Michigan City, Indiana, where he married Delia Dyer. He had quite a family of children. Phoebe Emeline, my mother, was born June 11, 1820, married Norman Cross when she was but eighteen years of age, removed to Valpariso, Ind., where their family was raised. Emily, born, 1821, married Archibald Harper, a farmer at Door Village, Layport Co., Indiana; Harriet, born 1822, married a Mr. Beebe, a farmer, near Valpariso, Ind.; Samuel and Elizabeth, twins, were born in 1823. Samuel married Jane McKinley, at Janesville, Wis. (a relative of Wm. McKinley, late president of U. S.); Elizabeth married Benjamin Schooly, of Penn., for her first husband. They had no children. After his death she married the second time, a Mr. Pierce, of Wisconsin. I think there were children by this marriage. In the Dudley family there were but three children—boys. All grew to manhood, were married, and I think had families. Only one now living, Andrew Dudley. Smith Dudley was a sergeant in an Illinois cavalry regiment during the rebellion, but I do not remember the number of the regiment. Andrew Dudley is a merchant in one of the large towns of Iowa, but as I know very little of the families of my aunts and uncles, I shall not attempt to describe them.

Yours respectfully,

A. T. CROSS.

“What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue!” Only a few days ago Wilbur F. Day returned to New Haven from a European trip in good health and good spirits, and took up his weighty business burdens with renewed vigor and interest. Now, after a sudden and short illness, he has ceased from his labors, and will be seen of men no more. What a mystery and what a reminder to those of us who still go to and fro.

Mr. Day was one of New Haven's very best citizens. Thoroughly identified with her past and present, he so lived and worked as to do her honor and win honor from her. He made the bank of which he was for so long the animating and controlling spirit distinguished for soundness and safety. The acuteness and accuracy of his judgment in financial matters were firmly established and widely respected. His uprightness was a tower of strength to all whose affairs were in his hands. And his quietly persistent attention to duty gave him constantly increasing skill and efficiency. But Mr. Day was not alone a business man. He had a keen and comprehending mind which concerned itself with that which is best in literature and art, and he paid careful attention to matters of public interest. He could talk well, and had a fine perception and use of wit and humor. He was a very friendly man, though not in the demonstrative way of some. He was benevolent and quietly beneficent. The dearest spot on earth to him was his home, and he was a most devoted husband and father. His whole life was one of consistent integrity, quiet industry, and strict fidelity to duty. His pleasant speech and pleasing figure will be much missed by all who have been accustomed to them, and there are many hearts whose mourning for him will be deep and long.

JAMES ATWATER.

838. James, son of Titus; m. July 17, 1851, Jane L., dau. of Cheney Taft and Lydia Kennedy, b. Dec. 26, 1827. He d. Dec. 19, 1903.

He was born in Conesville, Schoharie county, N. Y., and obtained his earliest education in the common schools of his native village and later attended the Livingston academy. He graduated from the State Normal school in Albany in 1844 and at once took up teaching as his profession.

He went to Lockport, N. Y., soon after and was for seventeen years employed as a teacher in the old Lockport Union school. During a period of eleven years, during this time he was also the superintendent of public schools in that city. He was the teacher of mathematics in the Union school during his connection with it.

He finally left teaching to engage in the insurance business and for many years, he was prominent among the business men, building up a prosperous business in his chosen line. Mr. Atwater was a member of the board of education for many years after he became interested in business and was for three years or more the president of the board. He was prominent in local politics and was one of the staunch supporters in his community of Republican principles. He was honored with an election to the board of supervisors in 1872, serving for two years, and again he was re-elected in 1882 and served until 1894. He was elected mayor of Lockport in 1894.

Of him I. M. Atwood, a former pupil, writes: "James Atwater was by nature and grace—which with him were not twain but one—a prince among pedagogues. He was master of all the subjects he attempted to teach, master of himself, master of his pupils. He knew boys, he was not distant from them; every crook and turn in the multifarious nature of a boy had interest for him, and he was on to the most plausible urchin's trick before it was quite hatched. Girls were somewhat a mystery to him, as they are to all of us; but his apparently wandering eye read their minds as well as their faces, and if he did not cut into the quick with his sly remarks, as he did with us boys, it was because he was the soul of chivalry.

"Since I sat on those benches, which the board of education of that day thought were the last achievement of educational art, I have known many teachers in many states, and have served my own long apprenticeship as a teacher. It is not, therefore, without ample means of correcting the visual error of a too near view, that I have adhered to an opinion formed long ago. That opinion is, that James Atwater should never have gone out of the school room. He should have been advanced from degree to degree until he held a large life position as a teacher and educator. His intuitive insight into mind and character, his wide sympathies, his genial nature, his sound judgment, his capacity for taking on new views, and above all his aptness to teach, marked him out for one profession. It is, in my view, a distinct loss to the noble science of education, when a man so endowed and uniquely adjusted to his place as an educator, is turned aside into some other pursuit. Almost any other occupation is for such a man an inferior calling."

“The death of Lucy R. Elmes occurred April 7, 1905, at her home in Derby, resulting from a stroke of apoplexy. Mrs. Elmes was in her eighty-fifth year, and for about the past sixty years had been a resident of Derby. She was the widow of Thomas Elmes, prominent in Derby affairs a few years ago, and was the daughter of the late Charles Atwater of this city. She is survived by one son, William F. Elmes, who lived with her, and two grandsons, Frank and Thomas Elmes, both students at Yale university. Her death was mourned by a very large number of friends for during her long residence in Derby she had made hosts of friends both among the old and young, and her kindly disposition and entertaining manner gave her a charm which always made her company desirable. She was a member of St. James' church and in her earlier years devoted much time to church work."

873. Lyman Hotchkiss, son of Lyman; m. Oct. 7, 1835, Susan, eldest child of Elihu Sanford and Susan Howell, b. Oct. 17, 1813; d. April 23, 1879.

He was born at Cedar Hill, then a part of the town of Hamden, since incorporated into the city of New Haven, Conn. His father, Major Lyman Atwater, was a leading citizen of the town, and is described as "a man of restless enterprise and of great endurance, who added to the management of a large farm the conduct of a great variety of undertakings both at home and in distant places." His mother was the daughter of Punderson Hotchkiss, Esq., a respected citizen and manufacturer of the town of Hamden.

Dr. Atwater entered Yale College in 1827, and was graduated in 1831, at the age of eighteen, with the second honor in a class of eighty-one members, including President Porter, the late Senator Polk, of Missouri, Bishops Kip of California, and Clark of Rhode Island, and other eminent men. He spent the year following his graduation as head of the classical department of Mount Hope Institute, Baltimore, and then entered Yale Theological Seminary. At the end of his first year in the seminary he became tutor of mathematics in Yale College, in which office he continued for nearly two years, pursuing his studies in theology at the same time. He was licensed to preach by the Congregational Association of New Haven West in May, 1834, and in the summer of 1835 accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Congregational church in Fairfield, Conn., where he remained nearly twenty years.

He began in 1840 to contribute to the Princeton Review, and the mental power shown in his articles, with the stand which he took in Connecticut in opposition to the theological views of Dr. Taylor, Dr. Bushnell and others, brought him to the notice of Princeton College, which, in 1851, conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

In June, 1854, he was elected to the newly-established chair of Mental and Moral Philosophy, in Princeton College, entering upon his duties in October. In 1861 he was appointed to the Lecturership Extraordinary in the Theological Seminary at Princeton on the Connection between Revealed Religion and Metaphysical Science for the five years for which it was established. In 1863 he was unanimously elected by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (Old School) Professor of Theology in the Western Theological Seminary, at Allegheny, Pa., which chair he declined. The General Assembly (O. S.), in 1869, made him a member of the joint committee which perfected the basis of union upon which the old and new school branches of the Presbyterian church were united. From the year 1876 until the time of his death he was vice president of the board of trustees of Princeton Theological Seminary.

He was acting president of Princeton College between the retirement of Dr. John Maclean and the inauguration of Dr. James McCosh in 1868. After the year 1869 he was professor and teacher of Logic, Metaphysics, Ethics, Economics and Political Science. He was a voluminous writer, especially for the Reviews. In 1869, at the request of Dr. Charles Hodge, he became the responsible editor of the Princeton Review. In 1872 the Review was united with the American Presbyterian Review with the title of Presbyterian Quarterly and Princeton Review, under the joint editorship of Dr. Atwater and the late Dr. Henry B. Smith. Since 1854 his contributions to it have greatly exceeded those of any other man. Beginning with his well known essay on the "Power of Contrary Choice," in the October number of 1840, republished in the first volume of the Princeton Essays. His contributions to this Review alone had, in 1876, exceeded one hundred articles and 2,500 pages. They are largely philosophical, theological, ecclesiological, but they also extended to economical, social, political, literary and miscellaneous subjects evincing what a writer in the "British Quarterly Review" styles his "prodigious versatility of mind." Many of them were republished in this country and Europe. Dr. Atwater was so occupied with these and other kinds of authorship and in periodicals that he found time for little else but the duties of his professorship, his other publications being only an occasional discourse and a Manual of Elementary Logic for the Class Room, which came into large use. His articles on various subjects commanded wide attention and exercised large influence.

In the year 1871 Yale University conferred on him the degree of LLD.

Dr. Atwater died at Princeton February 17, 1883. At the funeral addresses were made by Dr. Noah Porter, president of Yale College, the classmate and life-long friend of Dr. Atwater, Dr. McCosh, president of Princeton University, and by Dr. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton Theological Seminary. Subsequently the Rev. Dr. William M. Taylor, of New York, was requested by the faculty to prepare a discourse commemorating the life and services of Dr. Atwater to be given at the ensuing commencement. This discourse with the addresses above mentioned were published in a Memorial Volume by the request of the trustees of Princeton University.

Rev. Amzi Atwater thus describes a visit to Dr. Atwater at Princeton: "In the year 1880, as our Indiana University summer vacation came earlier than those of eastern colleges, I thought to improve the opportunity thus presented of visiting Princeton, New Jersey, on my way to Yale commencement. Arriving in town, I was disappointed to find that the college work had been suddenly closed for the year some days earlier than usual on account of epidemic fever.

“But I was amply repaid for stopping by a most agreeable visit with our kinsman, Doctor Lyman H. Atwater, vice president of the university. I may have previously written him of my coming, but whether I had or not he received me in a most friendly manner, took me in a carriage over the town and through the most interesting college buildings, and introduced me to President McCosh, who had been called some time before that from a high position in Scotland, to the presidency of this institution.

“Though somewhat advanced in years and though his hair was gray and his form stooping, the fire of his eyes was not dimmed and his conversation gave evidence of the bright and vigorous intellect for which he was noted. The management seemed to have made no mistake in calling him to this place of honor. Princeton had just previously been strengthened and the scope of her work greatly enlarged by the gift of nearly two million of dollars from the estate of John C. Green. Dr. Atwater pointed out the new buildings just erected by means of the great legacy.

“These, no doubt, aided Dr. McCosh in making the success which he attained at Princeton. Our kinsman also took me to call on the mathematician, Professor Charles A. Young, who eagerly inquired about the astronomer, Professor Daniel Kirkwood, of Indiana University, and sent a message to him: ‘Tell him our new telescope is twenty-three inches aperture, thirty feet focus.’

“Doctor Atwater was a man of learning, high character and noble presence, whose worth was universally acknowledged. The ill health of his later years no doubt slackened his literary activity and may have prevented somewhat, toward the end, the full enjoyment of life.”

Dr. McCosh, former president of Princeton University, spoke of Dr. Atwater as follows:

“For nearly a third of a century he has been identified with all that is good in this institution. He lived and labored for the good of the college. He has had as much influence as any one man, perhaps more than any other, in forming the character of its numerous alumni, scattered all over the country, and fitting them for usefulness in various walks of life.

“We value him as a teacher, but we also revered and loved him as a man. Every one who knew him will be prepared to testify that he was actuated throughout by high principle, moral and religious. This gave a consistency to his character which made every one respect him. He labored to keep up a high standard of morality and piety among us. But he was far from being a man of mere head without heart. Underneath his sedate demeanor there was a deep well of feeling ever ready to burst out. He was firm in rebuking the erring, but was ever melted when he discovered signs of repentance. He was charged with the benevolent funds of this institution and administered the trust with great faithfulness and kindness. Many student will remember forever the wise counsels which he gave them.

“His work and mine have been constantly and closely intermingled. Of all the instructors here I shall feel his removal most keenly. I do not know where we can get a man to take up the profound and varied subjects which he taught. It is due to the memory of one who upheld philosophy in Princeton College, not to let it down from the high place, which it has all along occupied here. The fittest tribute which we can pay to his memory is to secure that the work which he carried on so effectively will be continued in the ages to follow.”

Rev. William M. Taylor, D. D., speaks of Dr. Atwater's work as an educator as follows:

“Few men have been more successful than he was in training thinkers. He impressed all his pupils with his perfect mastery of the subjects with which he had to deal. They admired the clearness of his expositions; the fairness with which he stated the opinions of those from whom he differed; the absolute impartiality with which he criticised the views of others; and the candid spirit in which he advanced his own. He would not do their thinking for his students; but he furnished them with the needful data, and then encouraged them to form their own opinions while he stood by ready to guide them in the effort. They felt, moreover, that he understood not only his subjects, but his students. He never forgot that he had once been a young man himself, and he could put himself back into the place of an undergraduate and look at things from his point of view, with greater ease and accuracy than most men of his age and acquirements.”

Rev. John DeWitt, D. D., professor in Princeton Theological Seminary, thus writes:

“Dr. Atwater's exceptional success as a teacher, now seems to me to have been due very largely to two things; first, the force or weight of his personal character which compelled both respectful behavior and sustained attention from the class; and second, a power of absolute clearness in statement and explication. . . . Besides these, his teaching was marked by a trait which I take to be a great merit, namely, that he threw himself most heartily into great subjects.”

Professor W. B. Scott, of Princeton, says:

“In all the branches which he taught he showed himself a master, always interesting, instructive, and especially clear. His custom was to give us an analysis of the lecture written out on the blackboard, and the value of his teaching largely lay in the perfect system to which he reduced everything, so that those who ran might read."

874. Grace Clarissa, dau. of Lyman, m. Nov. 26, 1838, as her second husband, Elias Bradley, son of Ichabod Bishop, b. Aug. 5 1795; d. June 18 1866. He lived in New Haven.

He was a direct descendant of John Bishop, born in England, came to Guilford, Conn., in 1639, and one of the founders of the colony, died 1661. Ichabod (father of Elias), born at East Haven, Conn., 1750, died 1811. Elias, born at East Haven 1795, d. 1866, married his first wife, Amanda Street, granddaughter of Rev. Nicholas Street, associate pastor with Rev. John Davenport, founder of New Haven. His first wife died about 1835. He married his second wife, Grace Clarissa Atwater, a descendant of David Atwater, the youngest of the emigrants who came from England in 1638 with Eaton and Davenport, Nov. 26, 1838. Mrs. Bishop was born in the house still standing January, 1906, at Cedar Hill, where her father, Major Lyman Atwater, was born and on the original land deeded to David Atwater in 1639. Major Lyman Atwater was the fifth generation of eldest sons who owned this land. After her marriage to Mr. Bishop she lived at East Haven at Mr. Bishop's home which originally belonged to the Rev. Nicholas Street, and during Lafayette's visit to this country he spent a night at this house. Their first child, Henry White, was born here about 1840. A few years later Major Lyman Atwater sold to Elias Bishop the old homestead at Cedar Hill as Mr. Atwater's business interests were in Bennington, Vt., where he removed and remained during the rest of his life. He was buried there. Mr. Bishop was a business man in every sense of the word and transformed the Atwater home into a very busy place. He was a large buyer and seller of stock, mostly horses and mules, shipping large numbers of them to the West Indies. Every portion of the large farm was put into use and presented a very busy place during his life. Five children were born at the Atwater house—Ellen Amanda, Frederick Foot, Grace Clara, David Atwater and Charlotte Merina. Mr. Bishop died June 18, 1866. He was an Episcopalian and his wife attended that church after her marriage, but attended the Center Congregational church until her marriage. After Mr. Bishop's death Mrs. Bishop remained at the old home until September, 1870 when she sold the Atwater property to John W. Bishop, of New Haven. There were about one hundred and thirty acres. A large part of the land is now known in 1906 as the beautiful East Rock park. In 1870 Mrs. Bishop bought a home on Chapel street, New Haven, and removed there where she remained until her death in October, 1896. Her sons, Henry and David, have been carrying on the shipping business their father founded until the present time at Jersey City, N. J. Her youngest daughter, Charlotte, married May -5, 1870, Frank Augustus Monson and always remained with her mother and is now living in the home where her mother died. Mrs. Bishop died in her 83d year and her last days were peaceful and happy. She could enjoy everything and was confined to her bed but a few weeks. She was a beautiful type of an ideal New England wife and mother.

938. Lucy Aurelia, dau. of Joseph, m. Feb. 13, 1853, Seymour Z. Miner, of Homer, N. Y. Of this family the following is communicated: "Mrs. L. Aurelia, widow of Seymour Z. Miner, who died last March, passed away at the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. F. Miner, in Skaneateles Monday at about 4 p. m., after an illness of about three weeks of typhoid fever. Mrs. Miner went to Skaneateles about a month ago to visit her daughter-in-law. She was in an enfeebled condition, as a result of the very severe afflictions suffered, first in the death of her only son, Prof. H. F. Miner, in New York on February 18, followed by the loss of her only brother, J. C. Atwater, on March 19, 1905.

"Mrs. Miner was the daughter of Joseph and Lucy (Brown) Atwater, and was born February 2, 1835, and most of her life had been spent in Homer, though a few years of her girlhood were spent in Scott, and a few years also in Skaneateles, while her son was principal of the academy there. She was married February 13, 1853, to Seymour Z. Miner, of Spafford. Two children were born to them, a son, Frank H., who died recently and a daughter who died in girlhood.

“Mrs. Miner was a member of the Congregational church and took much interest in church and Sunday school and was a successful teacher of a large Bible class in the Sunday school for some years. She was a woman of much intelligence and many attractive traits of character and had many friends who were much grieved and shocked by the unexpected news of her death which was doubtless indirectly caused by the severe afflictions which had so rapidly followed each other within a brief month.”

After graduating he taught for a year in a family in Oldham County, Ky. In 1837 he entered the Theological department of Yale College, and in 1841 was ordained pastor of the Congregational church in Ravenna, Ohio. In 1849 he resigned that pastorate and, after spending a year in foreign travel, was installed in 1852 pastor of the Congregational church in Salmon Falls (Rollinsford), New Hampshire. In November, 1857, he removed to his native city and spent several years in missionary work, gathering a congregation in the eastern part of the city. In 1863, a church having been organized in this congregation, he was installed its pastor, and so remained to the end of his active ministry, in 1870.

He has written a volume on "The Sacred Tabernacle of the Hebrews" (pub. 1875), and another entitled "The History of the Colony of New Haven to Its Absorption into Connecticut" (pub. 1880). He edited a "History of the City of New Haven," published in 1887 by W. W. Munsell & Co., and contributed many valuable articles. On account of his painstaking research and accurate knowledge he was considered an authority on matters pertaining to the early history of the Colonies of New England. He published a geneology of the Atwater family in 1851; revised it in 1873, and was engaged in this work, revising and correcting, up to the time of his death.

He married Aug. 9, 1844, Rebecca H. Dana, daughter of Deacon David Dana of Pomfret, Vt. Her grandparents removed from Pomfret, Conn., and were among the first early settlers of Pomfret, Vt. Her grandmother, Hannah Pope Putnam, was the eldest daughter of General Israel Putnam. Their only child was Elihu, born March 30, 1855; died September 16, 1860. His father's family consisted of nine children. His early education was principally with an axe in the forests of Pennsylvania and Ohio which were then frontier states. In December 1841, accompanied by a sister, the late Mrs. A. R. Harper, of Chesterton, Ind., he started with a team and wagon for the timber regions of Wisconsin but owing to the severity of the weather and lack of funds, they stopped at Michigan City, where afterward both were married and lived for some years. He purchased some timber land a short distance southwest of the city and engaged in getting out timber for the government harbor, Blair's warehouse and the ship yards, then located there. In 1849 he traded for and moved to a portion of the farm on which he continued to reside during the remainder of his life. He was of a pecular sturdy nature, exceedingly firm in what he considered right, of the strictest integrity and independent in the fullest sense of the term. He never shirked labor and chose for himself the hardest duty.

1010. Moses, son of Titus; m. Amy Wison, b. in 1775; d. Dec. 11, 1852. He d. Sept. 13, 1836. Moses was a farmer and resided in Hillsboro, N. C. He was a man of clear head, cool judgment and industrious habits. He began his married life with very little save his trade—that of saddler. He died when about 56 years of age, leaving a number of slaves and several hundred acres of land for each of his children. This fact shows him to have been a good business man. His children always spoke of him as being strictly honest in his dealings with others and as a man who was quick to see a good investment and as one who kept himself in readiness for such whenever presented. It was the custom in his day for almost every one whose circumstances would allow it to own a distillery. He owned one and taught each of his sons to operate it. While he drank to excess sometimes, and at such times was violent and rough, through the influence of their mother, not one of the children drank to excess—instead, were leaders of the temperance movement while they lived. Moses was a born leader—indeed, he commanded where he had authority, but he was strictly just to command obedience, as he was to punish disobedience. He was devoted to the welfare of his home and family and when not maddened by drink was kind and affectionate. His wife was a model woman, sweet spirited, kind, gentle, loving and lovable. She suffered without murmur and was ever ready to forgive and forget. Her influence still lives in her descendants and will continue. Moses Atwater died in his 56th year, honored and respected for his sterling character and forgiven of his faults. His will reads as follows:

“I, Moses Atwater, of the county of Orange and state of North Carolina, do make this to be my last will and testament in manner and form following. I lend to my wife Amy three negro boys, named Joe, Jack and Aaron; likewise two negro women, Milly and Ann, and Ann's two children, John and Stephen; likewise the land and plantation where

I now live, estimated at 400 acres; also the land that her father left her, and forty adjoining the same and fifty acres adjoining the land I took up; also choice work horses; and grews and plows for the same and working utensils sufficient to carry on the farm; three cows and calves; five ewes and lambs; hogs sufficient for her family use; one year and sows and pigs sufficient to raise from for future support; with kitchen and table furniture sufficient for her use; two feather beds, steds and furniture, and likewise $400 in cash; if it should be needed for her support, otherwise to return to my estate, and at the death or marriage of my said wife Amy I give and bequeath to my son Jehiel all the money both real and personal (except the cash which is herein mentioned and intended to be loaned to my wife Amy during her natural life and widowhood).

“I give and bequeath to my son Wilson all my land on the west side of the highland branch to the meadow branch and west of a line of the said meadow branch to a poplar; south to a poast oak in James Norwood’s corner line.

“I give to my son Jahaza all my land lying south of the line called Daniel’s line, near Betsy Smith’s old cabbin and all south of Maderson Cook’s line to Isham Smith’s spring branch; also a small piece of land estimated at 15 or 20 acres bounded by land which said Jahaza purchased from John Farrington, and Farrington’s old mill path leading to the cotton gin house on the south side of the creek.

“I give to my daughter Lois Straud during the term of her natural life a negro girl named Joice with her increase which said negro girl said Lois has now in her possession, and at the death of my daughter I give and bequeath the said negro girl with her increase to any and all the children of my daughter Lois, share and share alike.

“I lend to my daughter, Celia Strand, the negro girl Mary which is now in her possession with her increase during the term of her natural life and at her death my will is the said negro girl with her increase shall descend to any and all the children of my said daughter Celia, share and share alike.

“I give unto my son Jehiel the balance of my mill tract of land purchased from Farrington not before given to my son Jahaza and likewise the balance of my land in Chatham not already given away lying on the south side of the land I now live on.

“I leave all my negroes not heretofore mentioned to be equally divided between my sons Wilson and Jahaza and my two daughters, Celia Straud and Lois Straud.

“All the remainder of my estate not heretofore mentioned of whatever kind or quality it may consist I leave to be sold and the proceeds of such sale together with the cash I may leave and the surplus of the money loaned my wife (if not applied to her use) divided amongst all my children I have, share alike (viz: Wilson, Edmund, Jahaza, Jehiel, Lois Straud and Celia Straud).''

The death of his father when he was eleven years old, led him to seek employment, and after a year or two of private schooling in North Guilford and Branford, he became a clerk in Mr. Murdock's dry goods store in New Haven, Conn. An opportunity was offered him to become a clerk for Baldwin, Kent & Co., a wholesale dry goods house in Richmond, Va., and he accepted, going by way of a schooner from New York. In a few years he returned to New York as a resident partner, doing the buying and other responsible duties. He was a conservative and yet a progressive man with large business interests, unostentatious and untiring in his promotion of great enterprises, but commercial and religious. Removing to Springfield, Mass., he was the originator of the Glasgow Mills, at South Hadley Falls, for the manufacture of ginghams; also the Springfield street railroad which he founded and supported during the trying years of its beginning and was also closely identified with the Memorial church of that city, in fact, he and Dr. J. G. Holland may be said to be its founders. His friendships were strong and tender and he was broad in his religious views and much given to hospitality and especially fond of entertaining clergymen.

Soon after, he was appointed assistant physician at Bellevue hospital where he remained twelve months. During this term of service Charles Dickens came to this country and at a banquet given the distinguished visitor by the mayor of New York he was present. Locating in Brooklyn, N. Y., he practiced medicine there until owing to impaired health he relinquished his profession and went to Cleveland, Ohio. He was health physician of the city and during the cholera epidemic of 1848 was for a time in charge of the lunatic asylum at Flatbush. Also surgeon of the 64th Regiment of N. Y. State Infantry, a charter member of the American Medical Association and also of the Pilgrim church of which Rev. Dr. Storrs was so long pastor; also one of the original members of the New England society of Brooklyn and the Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. During his residence in Cleveland he was an elder in the First Presbyterian church. Returning east, he resided for a few years in Bridgeport, Conn., where he was a director in the Bridgeport National Bank and Bridgeport library. His present residence is Springfield, Mass.

The following obituary was published in the Christian Standard August 7, 1869: "Another Christian mother has fallen. Another devoted disciple sleeps in Jesus. Sister Pierce has been for twenty-five years one of those unassuming but faithful Christians whose sterling worth was felt and acknowledged by all. Men may boast of mighty achievements, of great deeds done in the name of the Lord for suffering humanity, but the unostentatious and oft times unseen works of love from the hand of Christian mothers eclipse them all, and will follow them to constitute bright gems in their crowns of glory."

He was born at Dover, N. H. The son of a physician of repute he was surrounded from his youth with the influences of intellectual culture. Mr. Spalding was for many years connected with journalism in New York city. During a protracted tour in Europe he corresponded with various New York papers and so finished was the style of his letters and so broad his views of European politics that the series attracted unusual attention. Upon his return to this country he became attached to the editorial staff of the New York Times. He continued to hold that position until failing health compelled him to abstain from labor.

Mrs. Spalding was a woman of large and far reaching ideas. She sought to be conversant with the signs of the times and desired to use their tendencies for the general good. Her sympathies were enlisted in all public questions through the journalistic career of her husband, James R. Spalding. The traditions of journalism remained in Mr. Spalding's family after his death, Mrs. Spalding ever showing a public spirited interest in affairs of general moment. She was always a friend of literary culture, of the spread of intelligence and of the elevation of the standards of education. She had read and traveled extensively both in this country and Europe and was able to delight with the charm of her conversational powers and social grace all those who were fortunate enough to have known her.

The following is a clipping from a newspaper: In the death of Mrs. Bostwick New Haven loses a woman of sterling character, of delightful personality and an edifying Christian. For forty-two years this family had resided at the old homestead on Olive street. Mrs. Bostwick was born in this city in 1824, and was the second daughter of George Rowland and Ruth Caroline Atwater, dau. of Capt. Elnathan Atwater, the latter a prominent shipmaster of his day, who was extensively engaged in the West India trade. Mrs. Bostwick had been thoroughly educated and was a graduate of Miss Comstock's well known academy, where she especially excelled in mathematics. A former member of St. Paul's church for the past forty years, Mrs. Bostwick had been a devout and edifying member of St. John's church. In 1851 Miss Rowland was married to Frederick L. Bostwick, and is survived by two sons, Frederick and Thomas A., and widowed daughter, Mrs. Caroline R. Jones. Mrs. Maltby, her other daughter, died three years ago. Her brothers, Thomas Fitch Rowland of New York, and Frederick C. Rowland, and her sisters, Mrs. Ruth A. Tibbals, Miss Sarah M. Rowland and Miss Jennie Rowland, and also five grandchildren, will receive the sympathy of all who knew this venerable lady. The impressive funeral service at St. John's church was followed by that of Mrs. Rowland, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Bostwick, who died about eighty-eight hours after the death of Mrs. Bostwick.

Westfield, April 14, 1906.—“How hath the mighty fallen!” The hallowed room in the old Atwater tavern, also known as the “Washington tavern,” in which the immortal Father of His Country twice passed the night when marching through Westfield, is now used by an Hungarian family as a resting place for everything and anything that has passed usefulness.

Built about 200 years ago, this famous old tavern stands as firmly upon its foundations to-day as it did after it was first built. It is a large building, directly at the foot of the eight mile road over the South-quarter Russell hills to Blandford, and but a stone's throw from the Westfield-Russell line. The road to West Parish and the road to Russell are near it, and in the olden days when the stage coaches rumbled regularly over the hills the old tavern did a good business.

For many years this historic old tavern remained in the possession of the Atwater family. About thirty years ago the last of the family, the “Franklin Atwaters,” moved from it, and all of the antique furnishings were sold or removed. The mail box at the door now bears this “new American” name: “Mathius Pitonak.” The ancient spinning wheels are gone, the high-backed chairs have found their way into the homes of lovers of the antique, and the old chests and tableware have also found resting places in the homes of wealthy Westfield people.

Washington slept in the Atwater tavern when he was passing through this part of the country on his way to Canada, to join the army fighting the French. Homer Noble, one of the best informed men of the section, says that his grandmother, Hannah Noble, who died some thirty years ago, used to tell how she was sitting at the window in the second story, overlooking the road, when she saw the army coming up what is now known as Western avenue. She was spinning at the time, she used to say, and she recounted vividly how she assisted the tavernkeeper in making comfortable the stay of Washington and his staff. Washington also slept in the tavern on his return from the Canadian expedition.

The room in which the Father of His Country slept has been known for years as the "Washington bedroom." It is a large room on the second floor, and the windows face the northeast. The remainder of the second floor was given up to a large dance hall, finely furnished. Then there is what was known as the "big west room." In revolutionary days these rooms were the scenes of many jollifications.

Several years must have been passed before this tavern was completed. The lumber used in its construction, every stick of it, was cut and hewed from trees that stood on the hillsides within a few feet of the foundation. The cellar walls are made from stones picked from the fields. The beams are extra large in size, made from whole oak logs, and they are as solid to-day as they were when they were put in position.

The house was clapboarded and shingled. The clapboards were split from logs, one at a time, and then shaved down by hand. The work must have been very tiresome and difficult. The shingles were split from blocks of pine wood. The big beams were fastened with heavy wooden "nails," such as are used to-day in shipbuilding. The clapboards were held in place by iron nails pounded out of soft iron by hand. The heads of some of the nails are half an inch in diameter.

Some years ago the wind blew the clapboards from the front of the house, and the Hungarian who now occupies it put modern clapboards upon it. The roof has been covered over with a kind of tar and sand paper, and the old shingles are not visible. The sheds used in the old days by travelers are still standing, but are in dilapidated condition, and are used mostly as chicken coops.

The tavern is not on the beaten path of travel. Not many wagons go over the mountain to Blandford now, although the view along the road is superb. The Little river, which before long will furnish Springfield with its water supply, flows between Glasgow mountain and a hill to the northward, in a valley several hundred feet below the roadway. Hills tower on all sides, and brooks tumble in a picturesque manner down the rocky slopes along the roadside.

The degeneration of the old Washington tavern is but another indication of the disregard that the public is showing for relics of by-gone days. Before long the fireplaces where Washington warmed his feet will have passed out of existence, and the old tavern itself will have no semblance to the place it was in "ye olden days."

Remaining until the close of the war, he came to Saginaw, Michigan, where he built up a large and lucrative practice. He has served the city as mayor three terms. He was the senior member of the firm of A. T. Bliss & Bro., who had two large saw mills and several salt blocks there, also extensive lumber and mining interests in the west. He was founder of Bliss Hospital, which he ran independently for several years, afterwards donating it to the Methodist church. He has been vice-president of the Commercial Bank, and president of the State Medical society for several years, and is now president of the Saginaw Valley Medical College, having been one of the founders. His son, Dr. James H. Bliss, is a professor of anatomy in the same institution.

Horace, b. Aug. 30, 1845; moved to Michigan, 1865; settled on land near Saginaw that was almost a virgin forest, where he has since remained; m. Martha E. Benson May 30, 1866. Of his life he writes. I arrived on the land that has since been my home, July 2, 1862. It was a fine windfall, where the best pine only had been cut; sometimes taking but one or two logs from a large tree, and leaving the rest to waste on the ground. We cut down the poplar brush, from two to thirty feet high, and burned it, and then logged up the large timber and burnt what we could of that, leaving ninety log heaps unburned on eighteen acres, ploughed, sowed it to wheat, and the next year got but sixty bushels of wheat from it. My father worked with me two months, when he went back to Trumansburg, leaving me to finish and follow him in the fall. My father employed a man named Smith Denson to help us a few weeks. He is now the pioneer R. F. D. man in Saginaw. His sister, Martha Benson, I married in 1866, and she has been my helpmeet in all these years in bringing that farm from its chaos of wilderness up to its present condition of comfort and fertility. One hundred acres of land are under cultivation, with eighty acres of scattered woodland, used as a pasture, fenced with about three miles of pine stump fence; with the four thousand pine stumps that I, and later, my sons, have extracted from its surface. There is a cottage on the northeast corner of the farm that I have occupied with my wife since 1894, when I gave active charge to my two youngest sons, and tended garden and did what jobs of surveying that came along. I learned surveying in Trumansburg Academy, under the tutelage of Prof. E. M. Maynard, in company with T. H. King and Seymour Bates, both of whom I visited during my eastern trip.

Here is a little history written by him two years previous to his death, being then eighty-three years of age and able to read without glasses, a man who was well preserved, his memory being good as the following article will show, able to walk one, two or three miles a day, straight and erect in his walk; fond of society and a good talker and a great reader: Samuel T. Atwater was thrown on his own resource at the age of nine years, his mother having died and left four children (boys) younger than he. The father put all of the children out, as was practiced in those days. I have often heard my father tell of the sufferings from cold and hunger—children were not cared for and petted in those days.

About the year 1835 the writer came to Genoa, Cayuga Co., N. Y., then a quiet little hamlet with a few straggling houses and a woolen mill owned by John King. The mill was below where is now Howe's grist mill and the Remington foundry was just below that. I had worked seven years to learn the trade of carding, condensing and dyeing flannels, and was the first to introduce the scarlet dyeing in that vicinity. I remained there two years and did some fine work for the people in the surrounding country. This summer—1896—a gentleman while in Sempronious, saw a piece of very heavy flannel, scarlet in color, as bright and beautiful as when finished. It was serving as a chair cushion in the home of Mr. Slade. It was dyed at the old woolen mill, Genoa, and by myself some sixty years ago. It had been used in those days as a long cloak, now would be called an opera cloak.

A few years previous to my coming to Genoa, Abraham Stevens, now living in Auburn, worked in the Remington foundry and made a Teazle machine for napping cloth which I used. Mr. Stevens came to Genoa with a saw, hammer and jack plane, built a foundry, got up several patents, which brought him a nice little sum of money, was very successful in business, running the foundry, until he moved to Auburn and engaged in manufacturing engines, etc. He was considered one of the best mechanics of Cayuga county.

The Bayham murder was a very exciting tragedy of those years and was written up for all papers. The Veness murder was another shocking affair that was exhibited through the states on canvas by Harvey Piersons, George Martin and Phineas Young of Genoa.

In the days of "Auld Lang Syne," singing schools, skimmeltions, husking bees and apple paring parties were the only pleasures and recreations we had. In the little schoolhouse on Grove street, two miles from East Genoa, I taught the first singing school. That was about the year 1845, but few of my scholars are now living who came to that little old schoolhouse. But the building was usually crowded and the very walls rang with the songs of Coronation, Uxbridge and From Greenland's Icy Mountains. I first took up music at Trumansburg, N. Y. I attended singing school taught by Wadsworth, later the great compiler of music. Little did we then think of the work he would do, or that his compositions would be handed down for many generations.

In 1828 the old Presbyterian church at Northville (now called King's Ferry) was not as fine an edifice as the one of to-day. Every Sabbath, rain or shine, cold or hot, have I sat in the old "straight back pews" and listened to Rev. Seth Smith, pastor of the church for forty years. He devoted his whole thought and energies and life to the good of his people. The Presbyterian church at Genoa was not in the village, but one mile east, where the cemetery is now located. I have listened to sermons by Lyman T. Beecher, father of Henry Ward, Thomas K. Beecher and Harriet Beecher Stowe.

A very interesting occasion for those days was a debate between Holmes and Austin, held in the Universalist church of Genoa. Holmes was a Methodist and a presiding elder; Austin a Universalist. The board were Elder White of Lansingville, Garry Chambers of McLean, Stephen Woodin of Genoa. This debate lasted eight days; each side spoke four times daily, the subject being "Universalism vs. Methodism." At the close there was no decision. A book was published of the debate and no doubt many copies are now in existence. The old church was packed, the writer being present all through.

Last week we heard a person remark that Roswell Beardsley (now the oldest postmaster living) was the only one living who gave funds for the building of the old Universalist church. Mr. Beardsley says he cannot remember the year it was built but gave $50.

I will close lest I weary your patience, and am getting tired myself.

Yours

Samuel T. Atwater,

“Fifty years ago to-day Charles Law was united in marriage to Ellen Atwater, who was a daughter of Charles Atwater, a merchant at Providence, now Scranton. Mr. Law was at that time in business in this city. He brought his bride here, and this has ever since been their home. The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Law has been a most happy one, and it was with much propriety that they invited their friends to join with them yesterday in a celebration of their golden wedding. The celebration was held at the family home, on Luzerne avenue, and was a most happy event. The various rooms of the residence were exquisitely decorated with growing plants and cut flowers. Florist Harris fairly outdid himself in the floral display which received praise from all who witnessed it. Besides great banks of palms and other greenery, there was a profusion of cut flowers—crysanthemums, roses and orchids—the whole forming a most beautiful picture. During the afternoon and evening some 200 friends called to extend their compliments to Mr. and Mrs. Law, who were assisted in receiving by their sons and daughters as follows: A. F. Law, of Scranton, treasurer of the Temple Iron Co.; John H. Law, of Scranton, with the Title Guarantee & Trust Co.; Charles P. Law, of West Pittston, manager of the Pittsburg branch of the Atlantic Refining Co.; Robert M. Law, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Coal & Coke Co.; Mrs. Thomas H. Watkins, of Scranton; Mrs. George W. Cross, of Carbondale; Mrs. Herman A. Warner, of Decorah, Iowa. Two of the children, James C. Law, treasurer Chicago Tunnel Co., and Miss Anna Law, of Las Vegas, N. M., were unable to be present, but the parents were much gratified to receive congratulations from them, the former giving his message over the 'phone and the latter sending a telegram. Among those present were the following three persons who were present at the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Law fifty years ago: Mrs. Solon Woodward, of Carbondale; Mrs. Floyd, of Nantioke, and Mrs. Mary Hicks, of Green Ridge. Many other friends, including those of olden times were present, and the host and hostess were especially pleased at the presence of their old-time friends, Alex Craig and C. I. A. Chapman. As tokens of their esteem, the guests sent many beautiful gifts that will long be cherished by Mr. and Mrs. Law. Among them were sums of money in gold, choice pieces of cut glass and china-ware, some exquisite needlework and costly silver pieces. These tokens of regard, displayed in one of the rooms, were the object of much admiration.”

1755. Edward Irving, son of William; m. Sept. 19, 1888, Eliza Mather Brooks. He is one of the leading young business men of New Haven where he spent his boyhood days attending school, both public and private. After completing his business course, Mr. Atwater entered the employ of McAllister & Warren, insurance and loans, remaining with this firm for four years, when he joined his father, at a time when the latter was engaged in contracting for the construction of sewers and cellars, and gave employment to many men. Three years later the wholesale and retail paper, twine and stationery business was established under the firm name of W. J. Atwater & Co., of which Edward S. became manager, and he remained in that capacity for twelve years. Believing the time to be propitious for the real estate business, Mr. Atwater entered the field in 1901, his knowledge of this line being extensive and comprehensive. In 1901 W. J. Atwater & Co. discontinued the paper business and became engaged in the building and mason supply business, in the location occupied for more than thirty years by H. S. Clark & Co. Mrs. Atwater is a daughter of Samuel H. and Mary (Mather) Brooks, of Cheshire, Conn., and Troy, N. Y., respectively. The father of Samuel H. Brooks was David Brooks, and the Mathers trace back directly to the celebrated Cotton Mather family. Politically Mr. Atwater is a strong Republican and has been honored by his fellow townsmen with various offices of prominence, he having served for a year in the council and for two years on the board of aldermen. At this writing (1906) he is president of the State Business Men's Association.

He was born on a farm in Clinton township, La Porte Co., Indiana; was educated in the country school. In 1870 he joined a party who were to complete the building of Fort Totten, Dakota Territory. After returning he commenced a course at the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill. During the panic of 1873 was compelled to leave school and soon after began the study of photography. Was among the first in the United States to make the gelatine bromide dry plate. In 1887 he became a demonstrator for the M. A. Seed Dry Plate Co. He remained with them for thirteen years and during that time saw the business grow from a small factory to one of the largest in the world and the dry plate business from its infancy to a mammoth industry. During his engagement with this company he traveled over all parts of the United States and became one of the best experts and best known demonstrators of his day.

In 1895 he opened a photographic studio in the city of St. Louis, Mo., but as he still held his position with the M. A. Seed Dry Plate Co. he had to leave his studio in charge of others. In 1900 he resigned his position as demonstrator of dry plates and since that time has had charge of his own business, and is considered one of the best photographers in the city of St. Louis.

1785. Wilson, son of Moses; m. Dec. 23, 1819, Eleanor McCauley. He was a local preacher, Methodist E. church, South, and lived in North Carolina. He d. July 31, 1885. At his funeral the Rev. J. B. Martin said:

“In writing an obituary of this remarkable man I find myself embarrassed by a fear that I may seem extravagant to strangers. Those not acquainted with such a character may find it hard to believe that mortal man in these latter days can reach such a state of Christian perfection as distinguished this eminent servant of God. On the other hand I may find it equally difficult to employ such words as will faithfully portray his matchless worth in the estimation of those who knew him well. Loyalty to Christ and truth demands for him an illustrious place on the roll of saints and happy shall I be if I shall trace in living lines the virtues that in him shone. Of his parentage I need not speak except to say that his mother was a godly woman, which may in some measure account for his sound conversion and excellent piety. When a youth, he was deeply interested upon the subject of religion, and hungered and thirsted after righteousness. After much trouble and sorrow, and praying and seeking, he was powerfully and happily converted in early manhood, and forthwith sought fellow with the people of God in the M. E. church South, in which he lived and died, such a burning and shining light as this world has rarely seen. For several years his experience was not more marked probably than that of his brethren about him. He was sometimes in great ecstasy and then again in heaviness through temptations and fears. With this sort of experience he heard a lucid sermon on perfect love which he at once began to seek and found. From that glad hour to the day of his death, his peace flowed as a river, and his righteousness abounded as the waves of the sea. Doubts and fears and clouds were gone never to return. He read his titles clear, and walked with God the rest of his days. His life was a daily illustration of the power of the gospel to save to the uttermost. Having known him well for more than twenty years, I have no hesitancy in saying that I do not believe that a better man ever lived in this evil world. I do not believe it possible for a man to be better on the earth than he was and this is the verdict, so far as I know, of everybody that ever knew him. No wonder he was a powerful preacher. Holy in heart and life, and full of faith and the Holy Ghost, his ministry was a benediction every where, and he added much people to the Lord. All classes of people heard him gladly and profitably and the savor of his name is as ointment poured forth in all the region blessed by his life and ministry. He honored and adored every relation he sustained and every station he occupied. If ever there was a spotless character in this world, it was Wilson Atwater. Taking him, all in all, I never expect to see his like again. Having walked with God for more than three score years he went down to death without fear. He was not sick like other people. Through age and feebleness, he was confined to home and house and till the weary wheels of life stood still and his triumphant spirit ascended to the paradise of God. Let us follow him as he followed Christ.''

Respect. He lives at Thomaston, Ga. The writer called upon him while on a trip south in March, 1906, and was hospitably received. The old gentleman told of his life before and during the Civil War, and how, as captain of a Georgia Confederate Company, during an engagement one day, found three boys of about sixteen years and himself the whole line of battle, the remainder of his company being dead or injured while the regiment had retreated without notice. Of these four, two were killed while trying to escape crossing a field and Mr. Atwater and his boy companion only escaped by dropping in their tracks as if dead. During the last of the war it was necessary to recruit these boys in order to fill up the quota needed. The raid of General Wilson's army through Georgia swept away all of Mr. Atwater's farm stock, so that when he returned to his home it was a scene of desolation and despair. The men slaves had left for parts unknown but the negro women and children remained. The women offered to produce cotton and vegetables if given mules and plows to work with. Mr. Atwater started out to see what he could do, and finding he was privileged to take any loose stock he could find, he stayed around the Federal camp until he had secured a drove of mules, even having more than before the raiders drove his own off. Under discouraging circumstances his great energy predominated, and the writer found him at the age of nearly eighty situated in a large, beautiful country home, surrounded with luxury and comfort, and a devoted family, completing the fireside picture of domestic happiness and contentment.

He lives in Thomaston, Ga., in the vicinity of which he has been a Methodist exhorter for over half a century. The writer called upon him in March, 1906, and found him in bed, a victim of the old fashioned shouting and ranting preaching, which has about passed away. It was only natural he should ask what church I attended, but when informed I did not attend any, that the Golden Rule was my guide, though I confessed I did not always live up to it, he said he was sorry, and indeed his face was truly pathetic. He had lived a narrow, earnest life, spent in a small sphere, which was as painful for me to comprehend as my liberal ideas were for him to tolerate. He had worn out in shouting his religion which must have brought more fear than comfort. That was the kind I found in my childhood, and I had hoped that it had long since died out. To live a Christian life it is not necessary to be so severe and earnest as to shut out all pleasure or intrude its harshness upon those who believe it is unnecessary. Mr. Atwater, no doubt, is a truly good man, but there are those of us going through life who do good, live correctly, but do not do it from having a creed bred of fear with damnation always in sight. How much better it is to be cheerful and hearty, than to carry sanctimony to the verge of distress.

Mr. Atwater belonged to one of the oldest and most highly respected families of New Haven, to a family long to be remembered both for intellectual power and poise and for spiritual greatness manifested in countless deeds of kindness and loving service. As the great-grandson of Elihu Sanford, he enjoyed all the sweet and inspiring influence of a cultured and Christian home. When a boy, he was greatly interested in all that pertained to the early history of New England, and especially to the military achievements of the revolutionary heroes. His enthusiasm in this direction increased with his increasing years. Improving every opportunity for gaining knowledge of the colonial affairs, both by personal research at the library of Yale university and of the Historical society of which he was a life member.

To explore an old house, dating back to the Old Colony times, aroused his delight, and he was constantly alert to acquire information of a local character, which had been preserved either by family tradition or in old and unpublished documents.

Spending all his life in New Haven he naturally began his observations in this vicinity, so rich in memories and reminders of the past. Among the first of the numerous articles which he published in the Courier was that entitled "A House With a History." This describes the old Morris house in East Haven. Shortly after there appeared from his pen an interesting sketch of the Saltonstall family, and a detailed description of Governor Saltonstall's house. This was written from notes which he made when at the house and shows with what searching and careful attention he conducted his inquiries.

An idea of his wide interest in historical matters may be obtained not only by a perusal of his published articles, but also from the fact that he had personally studied the relics, famous localities and documents at Salem, Plymouth and Boston, and also at Philadelphia. Pilgrim hall at Plymouth, the old State House at Boston, Independence Hall in Philadelphia, all were familiar to him, and were themes on which he could converse in a most charming way. As time passed on his horizon broadened, and he extended his researches into English and French history. In the latter, beginning with that portion which related to the Revolutionary war, he continued his study to contemporary affairs. In this connection he first published an article called "The French Army's Services" and also one on "New Haven's Famous Guests."

While a passion for history caused him to make this study his chief employment, he did not confine his attention to it exclusively. He was a member of the Young Men's Institute and the Young Men's Christian Association as well as a life member of the Historical Society, and of the Connecticut Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. He had an intelligent appreciation of nature and art. He loved to behold and describe a charming bit of scenery and was as enthusiastic over it as over a picturesque old church or a colonial mansion. This power is seen both in his account of Nova Scotia's Queen City and in the article entitled "A New Havener in Canada." By a few words, he suggests to the mind a picture of the Falls of Montmorency, the Capes of Trinity and Eternity, the Quiaehonan Falls, and the Annsable chasm. During the recent war with Spain he followed with especial attention the operations of the navy and when at Halifax he observed closely the docks and fortifications of that city and relates many details concerning their capacity and structure and also the fact that the United States battleship Indiana was repaired there.

Mr. Atwater devoted much of his time during the last year of his life to the study of the French language. He was rapidly acquiring an ability to read and speak it, and he intended to visit Paris, there to continue his researches in French history.

The public lectures delivered at Yale were attended with great pleasure by him. Those of Professor Wheeler on "Napoleon and Waterloo" and those of Professor Burns were often mentioned with great praise and admiration. At the time of his death Mr. Atwater had just finished an article on "The Connecticut Society of Sons of the American Revolution."

Mr. Atwater was not only characterized by his remarkable energy in historical study, but he showed in his life those qualities which make a true man and a faithful friend. Love of truth, devotion to duty, a courage undaunted by obstacles which render many despondent, and a firm trust in God, all were his. By his cheerfulness and hope, by his labor and his patience, his earthly life will continually be an inspiration to those who have loved him long since and lost awhile, again to behold him where there is no more pain, neither sighing, but joy and peace that passeth understanding.—New Haven Journal and Courier.

DOUBT AS TO ANCESTRY

The author is in some doubt as to whether he is correct in giving "No. 284, Abigail," as the wife of Jedediah Hull. In compiling the first volume he was informed that "No. 284" had married June 3, 1778, Thomas Walker. It was so printed, and was again printed the same on Page 49 of this book.

A careful study of the records of Wallingford and Cheshire make it now seem that this Abigail married Jedediah Hull, who died in the fall of 1784, when his will was probated, leaving an "only child" named Lois Elizabeth, a Lois being sister of the mother and a family name. Then, too, Samuel Hull, father of Jedediah, deeded several acres of land and a dwelling house to his son, the land being located on Honey Pot brook, the only consideration being "love and affection." This was in the spring of 1780. Abigail's home was in the vicinity of Honey Pot brook. The Atwaters and Hulls had lived there neighbors for years, and what should be more natural than that Jedediah and Abigail should have commenced housekeeping near the paternal roofs of both families. The only record of Thomas Walker is that he married an Abigail Atwater June 3, 1778, which is found in the book of marriages now in the hands of E. R. Brown of Cheshire. Then, too, as we have not the date of Abigail's age in the family pedigree we may readily assume she was Abraham's daughter from the fact that her brother, Samuel, was born in 1757 and she, according to the tombstone record, was born in 1758, a year later, the last of the family, and in no wise interfering with the dates of the births of the other children. Days have been spent verifying this one connection:

284. Abigail, dau. of Abraham, m. Sept. 9, 1780, Jedediah Hull. (2) Oct. 8, 1786, Edward Goodyear, son of Theophilus, of Hamden. He was b. March 2^d, 1761, and in the Revolutionary war was a corporal from Jan. 1781, to Dec. 1, 1871. She married (3) Solomon Aleott of Wolcott, Conn., and died in Camden, N. Y., Nov. 28, 1825, aged 67 years and three months. The Goodyear children were as follows:

Dolly, b. Aug. 25, 1789; m. Jonathan Prindle.

Edward,* b. Mar. 4, 1791; m. Olive Wolcott.

Abigail, b. July 23, 1793; m. Feb. 1817, Miles Hotchkiss.

Lotty, b. Jan. 18, 1794; d. Apr. 22, 1796.

Obedience b. Dec. 22, 1795; m. Feb. 1817, David Upson.

The children of Edward Goodyear, who m. Aug. 9, 1814, Olive, dau. of James Aleott and Hannah Barnes, were:

Harry A., b. May 29, 1815.

Lucius B., b. June 16, 1817.

Lorenzo M., b. Jan. 26, 1820.

Edward, b. June 26, 1824.

Linus S., b. July 18, 1827; d. Aug. 1840.

Pernett S., b. Mar. 12, 1828; d. Mar. 18, 1829.

Olive (or Love) b. June 3, 1830; m. May 3, 1855, P. Carrell Costello, of Camden, N. Y., but who later made their home in New York City. Their children were:

NEW HAVEN'S GREATEST CANE CUTTER

[New Haven (Conn.) Register, Nov. 14, 1906.]

In the passing of old "Dave" Atwater New Haven loses a quaint and odd character who, by his eccentric foibles made himself well known about town.

Old Dave hadn't been a year in the poor house when he died. He went there last March in the seventy-second year of his age and he failed rapidly as the weeks went on. Dave loved his freedom. He loved the open air and the privilege of roaming about as he pleased.

And Dave loved his canes, too. Of course he couldn't have them with him in the poor house and it was indeed a blow to him when he was deprived of those canes. 47,000 of them. Dave said he had. Perhaps he did and perhaps he didn't, but he had so many that it was a big undertaking to count them. They were Dave's pets. Carving canes was his life-time hobby. He stored them away in his attic, his "museum" he called it, one by one as fast as he cut them and let them lie there. Dave would never sell a cane. He would have made money if he did. He just carved them because it was his hobby, that's all. He carried a different one each day and occasionally gave one away to a friend, but he never sold one.

Some of them were unique, too. Dave used to go out on a roam about the Woodbridge hills several times a week with a little old hatchet stuck in his belt to cut cane material.

Hickory saplings he liked best, and he would cut them up by the roots until he had gathered all he could carry. Then he would trudge home with them. The roots of the boughs served as the head of the cane. Dave would carve root and all with strange designs and then pile it away with the others in his "museum." If he ever had a visitor he always insisted upon showing him the canes in the "museum."

Whenever Dave moved from one house to another he had his troubles moving his "47,000" canes. He wouldn't leave the house until he saw every cane aboard and off for the new home. A few years ago when the old man moved from Greenwich avenue to Nash street, the truckmen found an attic room just heaped to the ceiling with canes. Every one of them had to be moved, said Dave, and so they were, in two truck loads.

Then last March when Fate sent Dave to the poor house, he put up a hard fight against being taken away from his canes and his museum.

Since his confinement the canes have been scattered about and destroyed. Atwater was eccentric in many other ways. He had quite a history. His old home was in the Atwater homestead which for years was a landmark standing on the site of the Hutchinson, corner of College and Crown streets. When Dave's folks died some years ago he was left the old home and quite an estate.

On account of his eccentricities he was declared an unfit person to have care of the property and a conservator was appointed. He was well taken care of while the estate money lasted. When the old homestead was sold a place was bought for him somewhere else. When the estate began to dwindle he was moved to Greenwich avenue. Then he was moved to Nash street where he lived with his wife, his canes and two pet dogs until all the proceeds of the estate had been used up and he was left destitute last winter.

When it was thought best to send him to the almshouse last March Dave put up a great kick. He was ejected from his house. When the trucking men came to put him out he bolted the doors and "sicked" his dogs on them. Then a sheriff was sent out, but Dave threatened to do him up and it was necessary to send the police up. Dave and his wife with all their belongings were put out in the street in the rain-storm. Dave was then taken in charge by the city and sent to Spring-side. His wife went to some friends.

Dave was once on the police force as a supernumerary. Some say he used to use one of his canes as a club. He was in the army for a short time, too. He was sent to an insane asylum years ago, but didn't stay long. Dave used to say that he had been a guard in a prison and he often showed a cane which he claimed was given him by a prisoner—an odd shaped black stick engraved with curious figures and inscriptions.

Captain Brewer of the Grand avenue station, who has known Dave for the past forty years, says that another hobby of the old man was to collect relics and curiosities. "A piece of bark from an old elm, a piece of wood from an old house, an old coin, an old piece of china or anything that happened to strike him as interesting would be put away in his 'museum,'" says the captain.

CRITICISMS OF FIRST VOLUME

[Hartford Times.]

Atwater History and Genealogy. Compiled by Francis Atwater, Journal Publishing Company, Meriden.

This record is based on the genealogical tables prepared by the Rev. E. E. Atwater and the English record prepared with much care and labor by Robert H. Atwater, the record made up by the latter forming Part I. in the book. The second and larger part is that for which Mr. Francis Atwater is directly responsible, although he acknowledges important contributions from many sources. One of his chief objects has been to obtain records of family history and personal traits in addition to the mere record of births and deaths and relationships, and in doing this he has shown assiduity and a disposition to preserve whatever seems interesting even if it does not always make for the dignity of the family name. Many of the stories are amusing and some have value aside from any merely family interest.

It is evident that a wide field of inquiry has been covered and that much labor has been expended on the work, and it is partly because of this, and a sign of the search for accuracy and certainty, that the compiler speaks so freely and earnestly of what remains to be done. At the very beginning of his preface he says: "It (the history) is before you. It would be a pleasure to state that it is complete, but it is not, and the publisher is too painfully aware of its imperfections and shortcomings." And in the book is a loose printed slip in which the publisher asks the help of all readers towards filling gaps or correcting any statement. This says that notice of "wrong dates, misspelled names, improper classification, and any information to make the work more correct" is desired, also additional historical or genealogical data.

This is the true spirit for such an undertaking, and it affords the strongest presumptive evidence of the care that has been employed. The book makes a neat volume of about 500 pages, and is a valuable contribution to the family records of the country.

[Hartford Courant.]

We have received from Francis Atwater, president of The Journal Publishing company, of Meriden, a copy of the "Atwater History and Genealogy." This elaborate and interesting book, compiled by Francis Atwater, as the modest statement of the title page runs, consists of nearly 500 pages. It is a family history, but not of the purely statistical kind. It goes just as far as possible into the lives and performances of the men and women concerned, and thus reinvests them with a bit of their original life. Family history, written in this large and vivid fashion, has more or less of a value for every reader.

The Atwaters have a history that is worth preserving. The earliest mention of the name occurs in the parish of Stone, county of Kent, England. The date is 1257. That was just after Magna Charta had been obtained from King John, and a while before the publication of Wycliff's Bible. The discovery of America was at that date nearly 250 years in the future. The Atwaters first appeared in this country in 1637. Joshua, David and Anne Atwater arrived here in that year, and were among the founders of the New Haven colony. They were from Lenham, in Kent county. Kentishmen have always maintained a reputation for good sense and courage. They are known in history and poetry as men of excellent stuff. Mr. Atwater says of the county itself: "It is claimed that of all the counties of England it was first inhabited, first civilized, first Christianized, and never conquered." Among this sensible, sturdy, and self-reliant people the Atwaters of those early days were persons of consideration. They were equally so after their migration to this country. All along in their history they have been of the Magna Charta Bible stock. Cool-headed, intelligent, enterprising, with a tolerably good degree of confidence in their own opinions, they were bound to emerge, in the case of individual representatives, from the general level. We know that this is a rather personal manner of dealing with the matter but a family history; made up on the biographical lines of the "Atwater History" invites to this form of consideration.

Those old traits have been reproduced again and again, down to our own day. This volume is dedicated to the memory of a youthful Atwater, who was drowned August 23, 1900, at the age of twenty years and three months. He was the son of the author of this volume; and his father says of him that he was "not only an Atwater in name, but by character, habit, build, and in general make-up." Tall, well proportioned, with high cheek bones, kindly eyes, and the tenderness of a manly nature, "he never lied, nor was he given to deceit of any kind." Family pride of this fine quality, valuing what a man is just as much as what a man does, is a very good thing to possess and to perpetuate. Francis Atwater must have given many, many hours of hard work to the preparation of this volume. But this labor has not been performed wholly for himself and his own generation. This interesting record will also serve as a code of conduct and a standard of performance for this American family for many years to come.

[Waterbury American.]

Interest in genealogical research is very apt to grow into a hobby if the person interested has time to follow it up. Even the person who has not time for exhaustive research often enjoys picking up some book detailing the history of a family comparatively unknown to him, tracing the various branches and here and there lighting unexpectedly on some familiar name of whose connection with his particular family he was previously unaware. And if the volume contains the records some family with whom the reader is more or less familiar it is doubly enjoyable.

The "Atwater History and Genealogy" compiled by Francis Atwater of The Meriden Journal and the Waterbury Republican is a well printed and bound volume of nearly 500 pages containing a vast amount of useful and interesting information. The title page bears in its proper heraldic colors the "Arms and Crest confirmed to Robert Atwater of Royton Manor in Lenham by William Harvey Clarenceux Herald at Arms in 1564." The additional information is given that the same arms were worn by John Water, York Herald, Times of Edward IV—Henry VII, who "assisted at the solemnity of Edward's funeral," 1483. Also by Thomas Waters, Carlisle Herald, Edward IV—Henry VIII. They are described as "sable on a fesse wavy argent, between three swans on the second, two bars, wavy azure, crest a demi-talbot argent, in the mouth and arrow guls."

The origin of the Atwater family in the United States is traced with certainty to and in the county of Kent, England; the surname appearing very early in English records, both in various forms of the English language, and in the Latin as ad Aquam and de Aqua. It appears in but twelve of the forty counties of England, the most northern of these counties being scarcely more than 100 miles from the south coast. In some of these it appears as early as 1325. The earliest mention of the name known is in the county of Kent, parish of Stone, "where the name Godefried at Water occurs in connection with th manor of Eylvarton before the year 1257." All the ancestors of the American Atwaters, however, seem to have belonged in the parish of Lenham, in Poytin, about ten miles from Ospringe. John Atwater, of Royton, was the father of Joshua, David and Anne Atwater, who came to America June 26, 1637, in the company of Messrs. Eaton, Davenport and others, founders of the New Haven colony. Joshua Atwater was one of the seven men who, accompanying Mr. Eaton from Boston to New Haven, remained in a hut on what is now the corner of Church and Meadow streets, New Haven, during the winter of 1637-8 to make observations. It is believed that the descendants of Joshua Atwater in the male line are extinct, as none who bear the name in America can be found who do not trace their lineage to his brother, David. Joshua died May 16, 1676.

It is supposed that David Atwater, who remained in Boston while his brother went to Quinnipiac with Mr. Eaton's company, did not go to New Haven till the spring of 1638. Besides the town lot assigned to him, as to the rest of the original settlers, the plantation assigned to David Atwater in the original division of lands among the planters was in the Neck, between Mill and Quinnipiac rivers, at the north of the present city of New Haven, the general name of Cedar Hill applying to this region. The eldest male representative in each succeeding generation was born there, and for a time, at least, resided there, and there are still descendants of the original David residing at Cedar Hill.

A great deal more of interest and value regarding the history of the Atwater family both in England and in America, is given in the first pages of the volume, with pictures, genealogical charts, etc., showing an infinite amount of patient study and research on the part of the compilers. There are family letters, lists of properties, copies of wills and others documents, all of which throw much light on the family history.

After the first ninety-four pages, the rest of the book is mainly taken up with genealogical records, which even a casual glance shows to have been compiled with rare skill and patience, so full and complete are they in all details, and so many bits of interesting biographical and historical matter are sandwiched in among them. Among the pictures is one of the old brick house on State street, in the Cedar Hill district of New Haven, which, according to tradition, was built by the second David Atwater, and is still in possession of one of his descendants. He died January 10, 1736. A silver baptismal bowl which has a curious interesting history, the gift of Jeremiah Atwater to the "First (Center) church of New Haven," is still in the possession of that church. There are plenty of interesting people, prominent in Connecticut history, all the way down the line, including the poetical Judge Amzi Atwater, of Ohio; the founder of the wholesale commission firm of Atwater, Mulford & Co., of New York city; and many others whom lack of space and time forbid us to mention in detail.

The dedication of the volume to the son of the compiler, Dorence Keith Atwater, is peculiarly touching. It reads:

This volume is affectionately dedicated to the memory of

son of the compiler and publisher, who was drowned August 23, 1900, aged 20 years and 3 months. It is fitting and appropriate that he should be the recipient of this dedication, as he was not only an Atwater in name, but by character, habit, build and in general make-up. He was tall, well-proportioned, had the high cheek bones of the Atwaters, kindly eyes, was of tender and affectionate disposition, was manly, upright and honest; of high principles, and was a conscientious student. He had no low traits. He never lied, nor was he given to deceit of any kind. He was cut off at the beginning of manhood, when all that he had done was in the nature of a preparation of what he expected to do. His efforts were all tending toward a successful career, and none doubted that victory would crown his work. He is gone, his parents' hearts are grieved and broken, and the only consolation afforded them is the memory of the eminent qualities which he possessed.

SUPPLIES A LONG FELT WANT.

New Boston, Bereer Co., Illinois.

August 30th, 1901.

Francis Atwater:

Dear Sir:—Last winter I wrote you that I was very ignorant of the history of my ancestors. I never knew any persons by the name of Atwater except my father and his family, my Uncle John and his two boys, my Uncle Thomas's son who died in his youthful days, one son of my cousin Henry and my own family. I had heard of people by that name and could have made their acquaintance but I had no means of proving my relationship.

Your book supplies a long felt want. I am now prepared to claim relationship with any of them! I now have authority to prove my claim.

I wrote you last winter that my grandfather died while my father was very young. My father never remembered seeing him. After my grandfather's death, my father went to live with his grandfather Forgason.

He seldom heard his father mentioned. He had some traditions.

One of these was that he was a son of John who was a son of John and this condition extended back for generations. There was always a John in the family.

I find this is true in your book. The numbers are 750, 293, 82, 20, 6.

My father had a notion, he thought it was a tradition, but it could only have been a dream, that his father had no relatives in America; that his father was a native of Wales.

You can imagine my surprise in learning that I am a descendant of a long line of the blue bellied Connecticut Yankees instead of being a Welshman. Later I will send you some corrections. I hope you will conclude to publish a new edition of your book. In case you do, before I am too old to attend to it, I will try to send you some farther history

Fraternally yours,

No. 4,893.

WORK OF GREAT MERIT.

The new Atwater family history is a work of great merit. In compiling and publishing it the editor has done our family a great favor.

It differs from many of the works of similar name in that it does not attempt to reduce all information to set form as the census-taker would. It has no stereotyped set of questions, the answers to which are put down in a table. This is a great advantage. The management has not assumed to dictate to each family as to what shall go into its history. The fullest liberty, the widest scope has been granted to each contributor to write up his own history and that of his ancestors in his own way. Hence the charm of individuality runs through the whole volume and you can read it from beginning to end with deep interest. Almost the only regret is that, in the case of some of the kindred, notably two or three prominent and honored members of the family now deceased, the living representatives have made so brief and inadequate a report. But where many were contributing to the work, some little weakness of this sort was inevitable. The book speaks for itself. It is a great boon to our family—a monument to the enterprise and public spirit of the editor.

 SATISFIED OF ITS EXCELLENCE.

Batavia, N. Y., Aug. 15, 1901.

My Dear Mr. Atwater:

Have received copy of Atwater History with bill. Please find check enclosed. I have only had time to glance at the work but I have seen enough to satisfy me of its general excellence and to entitle you to the thanks of the clan for the vast amount of labor and patience spent upon its production. I am looking forward to a careful study of its pages with pleasant anticipation.

Very truly yours,
