DAVID ATWATER AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

The history of David Atwater and his descendants cannot be told in a few words. The first Atwaters to come to America were David and Joshua and their sister Ann. Joshua became prominent in Connecticut and Massachusetts affairs, was married, had several children, but none to perpetuate the family name. The sister Ann, who probably attended to the household duties until the brothers married, is not mentioned afterwards. David, the ancestor of all Atwaters in this country until a comparatively recent date, left England in 1637. He was twenty-two years old when he landed in America. He had buried his father in November, 1636, and his mother the following January, and thus being liberated from filial duty joined the expedition of Kentish men who had become "infected with distemper for the authorized church." Their emigration is to be attributed to the discomfort experienced by the English Puritans in their native land, rather than to any attractiveness in this wilderness. It is impossible for those who have been surrounded with the security, beauty and plenty enjoyed by the posterity of these colonists, to conceive of the same territory as it was seen by their ancestors when they arrived, or as it presented itself to the eye of imagination when they decided to emigrate. This country is to its present inhabitants their pleasant home; but the Englishmen in the seventeenth century were uncomfortable in England, loved England as their dear native land, and thought of America as a foreign country, and as such, destitute of the attraction and charm which appertains to the ideal of home.

Moreover, emigration to the new world was not mere exile from a land they were reluctant to leave; it was exposure to suffering by cold and hunger, to peril of death by shipwreck, by wild beasts, and by treacherous savages. Such liabilities are, indeed, not unattractive to men whom love of adventure predominates; but the English Puritans were in general as free from that restlessness of mind which seeks relief in excitement as any people in the world, Religion, inclining them to sobriety and industry, fostered the love of home, of security and of comfort. Individuals among them may have been susceptible to love of adventure; but as a class, the planters of New England were men not naturally inclined to desert their homes, and expose themselves to hardships and perils of the ocean and in the wilderness. On the contrary their training had been such as inclined them to remain in their native land. This is true of even the unmarried men, like David and Joshua Atwater, but the reluctance to emigrate was far greater when one must expose sister, wife and children to hardships they were less able than the men to bear.

It was a great undertaking to prepare for a voyage across the Atlantic and a permanent residence in the new world. The ministers could embark perhaps, with their books and household stuff, but merchants and owners of real estate needed several months, after deciding to emigrate, for the conversion of their assets into money, or into merchandise suitable for the adventure in which they were engaging. Yet these young men, Joshua, who was a mercer, disposed of his goods, while David sold the real estate to which they had only been in possession of a short time, when they joined a company which projected something more than emigration. They were not to scatter themselves when they disembarked, among the different settlements already established in New England, but to remain together and lay the foundation for a new and isolated community. For this reason a more comprehensive outfit was necessary than if they had expected to become incorporated individually or collectively, in communities already planted. In addition to the stores shipped by individuals, there must be many things provided for the common good, by persons acting in behalf of the whole company. There is evidence, that after the expedition arrived in New Haven, its affairs were managed like those of a joint stock association and, therefore, some ground for believing that from the beginning, those who agreed to emigrate in this company, or at least some of them, associated themselves together as partners in the profit and loss of the adventure.

These early emigrants were advised to have victuals with them for a "twelve-month," to bring good stores of clothing and bedding; paper and linseed oil for the windows, with cotton yarn for the lamps. They were taught to ballast the ships with iron, steel, lead, nails, and other heavy articles of utility; also bricks. One Atwater house, supposed to have been built by Thomas, a son of David, the emigrant, when torn down nearly 200 years later, had bricks taken from it with "London" stamped upon them. The bulk of the cargo carried consisted of wearing apparel, bedding, food, tools, arms, ammunition and seed. Neat cattle and goats were usually taken, sometimes horses. Two months was perhaps the average time consumed in sailing from London to Boston in the vessels of that day. A passage was, indeed, sometimes made in less time, but in other instances was protracted to three months. A vessel made but one round trip a year, leaving England in the spring and arriving home in the autumn. Crowded cabins rendered the passage uncomfortable, even when speedy; but a protracted voyage often induced not only discomfort but disease.

It was in the summer of 1637 that the Atwaters landed on the coast near Boston. With others Joshua and David had heard from the Pequot Indian war of the land west of the Connecticut river. It was known in modern orthography as Quinnipiac. Joshua was included in an exploring party to look this over. It was too late in the year to send a report back to Boston and build houses in sufficient numbers to shelter women and children, so Joshua and six others remained through the winter, being sheltered by a hut situated near a creek. We may imagine they spent their time in hewing, clearing and sawing, in hunting and trapping, and in collecting by means of barter with the natives, beavers and other furs for the European market. What communication they had that winter with those in Boston must have been by Indian runners who could easily perform such service. It is probable they had commenced negotiations with the Indians for their land, built huts and made all possible provision for the arrival of those who were to come in the spring, which included David Atwater and his sister Ann.

It was on Friday when they left Boston, and, as they are said to have spent a fortnight on the voyage, it was the latter part of the week when they arrived. On the Sabbath they worshiped under an oak tree near the landing place. The purchase of the land had probably been perfected in April though no written deed was signed until the following November. The natives were, therefore, expecting the large re-enforcement received by the six Englishmen, one having died in the winter, with whom they were now well acquainted. They welcomed the newcomers and were pleased to have in their neighborhood a plantation of Englishmen, to which they might retreat when molested by their enemies and where they might barter their venisons, pelts and furs, for the much admired tools and trinkets of the English. They, now for the first time, saw English women and children and admired them with great curiosity. The planters brought with them or procured from Massachusetts, plants and seeds which soon yielded what they had been accustomed to enjoy in England. Grains, especially wheat, rye and peas were sown, and the reward was most bountiful. Then came the fencing in of land, pounds and pound keepers. David Atwater was appointed on a committee to see that swine were not allowed to stray from home and to provide penalties. Subsequently he appeared before the general court to explain why his own hogs were allowed to run around loose.

This was the beginning of what was termed for many years the colony of New Haven. The Quinnipiac river flowed through meadow land, and for three miles were salt meadows on both sides. It was near this river in what was known as the Cedar Hill district that David, the emigrant, took up his abiding place, a farm of some 160 acres. He was rated at this time as being worth 500 pounds, which for those days was a good sized fortune. The temporary shelters, which the first planters of New England provided for their families till they could erect permanent dwellings were of different kinds. Some planters carried tents with them to the place chosen for the new home; some built wigwams like those of the natives. Either specie would suffice for summer, but for winter they usually built huts, as they called them, similar to the later log cabins in the forests of the west, though, in some instances, if not in most, they were roofed after the English fashion of thatch. It was a peculiarity of New Haven that cellars were used for temporary habitations. They were, as the name suggests, partially underground and perhaps in most cases on the hillside. Rev. Michael Wigglesworth, who came to Quinnipiac with his parents in October, 1638, when he was seven years old, describes the cellar in which the family spent the first winter, as covered with earth on the roof. Such a covering might be effectual to exclude the cold winter winds, but it was a poor protection from heavy rains. When an old man he remembered how he had, while asleep, been drenched with water permeating the muddy roof and had been afflicted in consequence with a dangerous illness.

The diet of the planters consisted chiefly of domestic products, though it was only a short period before commerce with the West Indies was started, when the tables of the wealthy were supplied with sugar and foreign fruits. Indeed, there were many Atwaters who engaged in trading with these islands, bringing rum and molasses in their own ships and exchanging commodities raised at home and later mules and manufactured goods. These same Atwaters traded clocks in the south for the mules which they drove north and held until ready to ship. Only a short time ago an old barn in New Haven was pointed out to me as the place where the mules were sheltered. Kine and sheep were few during the early years of the Atwaters, but there was such an abundance of game that the scarcity of mutton and beef was but a small inconvenience. In towns venison brought in by English or Indian hunters was usually to be obtained, and at the farms wild geese, turkeys, pigeons, moose and deer were so plentiful that no household was without a bountiful supply. The rivers were full of fish, while at the sea shore clams, oysters and mussels could be obtained for the gathering.

A brew house was an early requisite demanded by the settlers and beer was as regularly on the table as bread. It is unnecessary to state that it was not of the 2.75 variety, but had a good stiff kick in it. Indeed, as late as my boyhood, it was customary to serve a hot toddy (cider brandy, sugar and hot water) to the minister when he made a friendly call. I well remember one stately old gentleman, who wore the old fashioned stock instead of a collar, when he came to our house one afternoon. It was after he had been entertained by several parishioners when it was noticed that it was not a reverential but another kind of "spirit" that prompted his performance. I have no evidence that a New England Atwater ever distilled spirits. The nearest approach to one was a cider mill owned by my grandfather, the product, a good share of which went to a still owned by a nearby neighbor. The Atwaters, as old time merchants, sold both cider brandy and West India rum. I do not believe they were tectotalers, but always had in the house and used liquor moderately and with good judgment. There was no comparison in quality of those days with the adulterated product of the present generation.

It must have been some years after David settled in New Haven before he married Damaris Sayre, daughter of Thomas Sayre of Southampton, L. I. There is no tradition as to how or when he met her. Indeed, it was not until 1881 that it was discovered who she was. A gentleman in looking over the probate records of Southampton reading the will of Thomas Sayre, found that he left forty shillings to his daughter "Damaris, wife of David Atwater, of New Haven." Thomas Sayre was a native of Bedfordshire, England. Two houses built by him and his son Thomas about 1648 were still standing until a few years ago, when they were demolished. The Sayre family were of high principles and as prominent as any on Long Island. David and Damaris were the parents of ten children. The whole ten took part in the early history of New Haven. The daughters married men of prominence. The first child married when she was twenty years old, John Austin. Most of their children died young. David, Joshua and John, however, had families whose descendants are numerous.

The second daughter, named after her mother, also married in her twentieth year. Her husband was John Punderson, only son of Deacon and Margaret Punderson. The father was an early immigrant. From him descended all the Pundersons in the country. There were three John Pundersons deacons of the First church in New Haven in succession.

David Atwater, the first son, married some one by the name of Joanna, which to this day is all that is known of her. It is supposed that he lived upon and cultivated a portion of the land originally assigned to his father. There was a two-story brick house standing until burned ten years ago, which according to tradition, this David built. The land is still in possession of his descendants. He had two daughters who married Bradleys. His son Joshua continued to cultivate the farm after his father's death.

The next son, Joshua, married Sarah Rockwell and settled in Wallingford. He died a comparatively young man, leaving no children.

John, the third son, married Abigail Mansfield. He took over the farm left by his brother Joshua. Before doing so he had learned to be a weaver and probably earned his living in New Haven working at his trade. At any rate, he was ever after called "Weaver." All of his children married except Mercy, whom I found no record of except her birth. Not one of them left their native town, but all raised families that were an honor to their community.

The fourth son was Jonathan. He married Ruth, daughter of Rev. Jeremiah Peck. He had eleven children. He was the merchant prince of New Haven, and his profits must have satisfied his ambition. The inventory of his estate found in the probate records, covers over eight closely written pages, and gives a variety of objects, great and small, suggestive not only of wealth but of the processes of its acquisition. There were several farms with tracts of land amounting to four thousand acres; province bills and interest bearing notes, a stock of merchandise for a retail store, indicating barter in local produce and in manufactures from beyond the seas, such as fine cutlery, broadcloth, Turkish wrought cushions; a wardrobe containing a number of coats with silver buttons; a gold seal ring, an ivory-headed cane and a gold watch, and finally three negroes. His whole estate was appraised at 15,323 pounds, which was nearly half as much as the official valuation of all estates in New Haven. This inventory is full of suggestions concerning the life of those early times. Its list tells of energy, industry and thrift. He lived to the ripe old age of ninety-four years.

Abigail, the third daughter, married Nathaniel Jones, son of Deputy Governor William Jones, who, like his brother-in-law, John Punderson, was one of the prominent men of New Haven. They had two daughters and one son.

Mary, the fourth daughter, married Ichabod Stow, son of Rev. Samuel Stow and Hope Fletcher, and for her second husband David Robinson. One daughter of Ichabod Stow married Jehiel Hawley, whose daughter Esther married David Beecher, grandfather of Henry Ward Beecher, the famous preacher.

The fifth son, Samuel, married Sarah Alling. He was a farmer and cultivated a portion of the land which had belonged to his father. He had a family of ten children. He was my progenitor. My line was Samuel, Daniel, Samuel, Timothy, Wyllys, and Henry. They were all farmers, except my father who had learned the trade of a stone mason and later became a contractor.

The youngest son of David was Ebenezer, who married Abigail Heaton. They had three daughters and one son. He was a tailor and lived in New Haven.

We have now accounted for the ten children of David Atwater. He lived to see them all happily married and established as good citizens, upright, honest and respected.

In the list of names of "Proprietors, New Haven, Conn., in year 1685," appear the names of David Atwater, Senior; David Atwater, Junior; John Atwater and Jonathan Atwater, the last three being sons of David Atwater, Senior.

Besides the town lot assigned to him, as to each of the original settlers, the plantation assigned to David Atwater in the original division of lands among the planters was in the Neck, between Mill and Quinnipiac rivers, at the north side of what is now the city of New Haven. The general name of Cedar Hill has been given to this region. Descendants of David Atwater still reside there. The eldest male representative in each succeeding generation was born, and for a time, at least, resided there.

David Atwater died October 5, 1692. His wife died April 7, 1691. His will is dated a week later, April 14, 1691, with an Appendix dated December 9, 1691. Examination of the will, in connection with knowledge obtained from other sources, affords information of interest to all his descendants. One of his six sons, Joshua, had removed to Wallingford. One of his four daughters, the eldest child, Mercy, who married John Austin, appears not to have been then living by the terms of the will in relation to her children.

There are special bequests of lands to each of the surviving five sons, David, John, Jonathan, Samuel and Ebenezer, determined in relation to the portions of the estate already received by each.

Two of the sons had already been established in business in New Haven, namely Jonathan, whose name appears in the list of "Proprietors of New Haven, Conn., in year 1685," the bequests to him being, in the words of the will, "besides what also he hath already received," and the youngest son and child, Ebenezer.

The portions of the estate already received by these two sons may be conjectured to have been the requisite money capital for business, and possibly the town lot assigned to David in the original division of the lands, with its improvements and the house and land formerly owned and occupied by Joshua, on what was known as Fleet street, bought by David from Joshua 19th June, 1665, after the removal of Joshua to Boston—which house is said to have been occupied by the descendants of David more than two hundred years—neither of these properties appearing in the inventory of his estate in 1692. To each of the three remaining sons there is a specific bequest of a homestead.

To David Atwater, Jr., whose name was in the list of Proprietors in 1685, as follows:

"Item. I doe Ratify and Confirm to David Attwater, Junior, my eldest son, my old House, Barn and Orchard, which he already possesseth, and twelve acres, lying on both sides ye creek, adjoining to meadow of Isaac Turner's, and twenty acres of upland, ten in ye Cornfield and ten in ye Neck, south of that peese of land fensed in on ye west side of Road and ye Rock."

"Item. I doe give and bequeath unto my son, John Attwater, ye House and accommodations at Wallingford, with ye Rights and Privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging, which I bought formerly Ephraim Young's land, and one acre more of silt marsh of Samuel Potter, with two acres of meadow I had of John Dod, next ye River, lying near my son David's."

To Samuel Atwater, whose name was not in the list of Proprietors in 1685, as follows: "Item. For all the rest of my lands, both uplands and meadow, with my dwelling house, barn and other buildings, with the Orchard, privileges and appurtenances, I give to my son, Samuel, to be to him and to his Heires forever.

"And for these lands and meadows, above mentioned, given to my other sons, my will is that it be to them and to their Heirs forever. And my further will is, if any sons see cause to sell any of their lands, they shall first offer it to their Brothers, that they may have ye first refusal."

It would appear that there had been three divisions of lands to the planters, according to their original agreement, the third division, as indicated in the inventory, being about one hundred acres to him:

"Item: From my owne 3d Division, and what I had of my son John, I give and bequeath unto my four sons, David, Jonathan, Samuel and Ebenezer, to be equally divided between them.

"And for all ye Rest of my personal estate, movables and stock of cattle, my will is it be equally divided between all my children, at least to ye value of it, my Grandchildren, sons of my daughter Austin, to be included for one share."

On the day of the marriage of Ebenezer, the youngest son and child, to Abigail Heaton, which was the last of the marriages of his ten children, David Atwater could doubtless reflect that, upon the execution of his will, each of his eight surviving children would be established in life with a place of residence. On that day, December 9, 1691, he recorded his great thoughtfulness and equal care for all his children in an Appendix to his will, without the formality of witnesses, in these words:

"Know all men whom it may concern, that I, David Attwater, Senior, Doe, upon further consideration, and from a desire to promote love and peace among my children, and to make, as neere as I can, an equal distribution of that estate which God hath given me, I do hereby, as my will, give to each of my children, out of Samuel's part, five pounds, to be paid out of ye stock of cattle or as he may think best."

These extracts from the will of David Attwater, of Royton in Lenham and Cedar Hill, New Haven, of natural interest to all who trace their lineage to him, whether they bear his name or not, may appropriately end with its opening and closing words:

"Know all ye men by these presents, that I, David Attwater, Senior, of New Haven, in ye Colony of Connecticut in New England, though weak of body, yet of competent, sound understanding and memory, do make and ordain this as my last will and testament, in manner and form following:

"Imprimis. I commend my soul unto the hands of God, through Jesus Christ, my Redeemer, and my body to the earth, to be buried in a comely and decent manner, according to the discretion of my executors hereafter named.

"Lastly. I do hereby constitute and appoint my loving son-in-law, John Punderson, and my son, Samuell, to be Executors of this, my last will and testament. And Capt. Moses Mansfield, Overseer. And doe order my son-in-law, John Punderson, and my son Samuell, to pay him twenty shillings for his trouble. And I doe hereby revoke and make void all former will or wills. And declare this to be my last will and testament."

The early Atwaters who descended from David, with the exception of Jonathan, who was called the merchant prince, and Ebenezer, who was a tailor, were nearly all farmers, living peaceful and frugal lives. They mostly settled near the old homestead, but finally began to scatter, the first one to leave settling in Wallingford some miles away. One farm acquired at this time still remains in the family, belonging to a descendant of the ninth generation.

Jeremiah, son of Jonathan, was also a merchant and, like his father, a man of a great deal of enterprise. It is a tradition that upon one occasion he ordered a keg of nails from some distant place. Upon opening the keg he found a top layer of nails and underneath all silver dollars. He remonstrated to the seller he had bought nails not silver dollars, but the reply came he had ordered nails and nails they must be. Therefore, inasmuch as the dollars had come to him in the mysterious providence of God, and were not gained by any labor or forethought of his own, he gave a portion in the form of a baptismal basin for the service and worship of God. Whether the story is true or not he did present a silver bowl to the First Church of Christ in New Haven and it is still in existence.

In 1718 Jeremiah was called a "brazier." He with two others were authorized by the General Assembly of Connecticut to set up a mill to improve linseed and rape oil. The law protected them for a period of twenty years under a penalty of fifty pounds for any violation against others starting in that line of business. In 1721 he was master of a sloop from Boston. Smallpox prevailed at that time. He was ordered to have the goods he shipped well aired before being exposed for sale.

The spirit of adventure broke out in Caleb, a grandson of David, about 1749 when he took his family and moved to Dutchess County, New York. It was Caleb's grandson, Stephen, who apparently made the first break from the orthodox church. At any rate he became a Quaker. His grandson, Hon. Richard Mead Atwater, said it was the pretty eyes of his grandmother, Huldah Mead, which not only captivated Stephen, but changed his religious conviction. Huldah did a good job for I have known many of her descendants and no better citizens exist.

In the fourth generation family ties became shattered very generally. Caleb Atwater, of Wallingford, a very successful merchant, bought from the state of Connecticut several thousand acres of land in the Western Reserve, or later the state of Ohio. Of one township named Atwater, another named Granger and also Geneva, Ohio, he was proprietor of all the land. He had fifty-five grandchildren to whom he gave 100 acres apiece and then divided the balance of his land among his children. He carried on the manufacture of gunpowder during the revolutionary war.

Ambrose Atwater settled in Vermont where he brought up a large family.

Jeremiah was steward of Yale college for twenty years. He seems to have been the first Atwater to have anything to do with that college. We are not informed if he was educated there, but presume from his holding office that he was.

Freeman Atwater became one of the first settlers and founders of Canandaigua, N. Y. His brother Elihu, became a lawyer, who migrated to Florida where he left a long line of descendants.

Abigail, daughter of Caleb, married Dr. John T. Andrews, and removed to Atwater, Ohio. Two of her sons became distinguished lawyers.

Merab, daughter of Reuben, married Stephen Rowe Bradley, who settled in Vermont. He was United States senator and served several sessions.

Elizabeth Mary Ann, another daughter of Reuben, married Gen. Andrew Hull, of Cheshire, Conn., who was elected to the Legislature for twenty sessions.

Noah Atwater was a Congregational minister in Westfield, Mass., having graduated with first honors of his class. Jason was another minister who settled in Branford.

Moses Atwater was probably the first one of the family to study for medicine. He graduated from Yale college. He was the first doctor in Canandaigua, N. Y., where he enjoyed for a long period an extensive practice. His brother Jeremiah located in the same town but became blind before his death in 1861.

Jeremiah Atwater was the first president of Middlebury college, Vermont. Lyman Atwater was acting president of Princeton college for many years. If he had not had a mind of his own and been subservient to others he could have been its president. He no doubt was the most able man who ever filled a chair in Princeton. He was spoken of as having a "prodigious versatility of mind." Another college president was John Milton Atwater, who succeeded President Garfield as president of Hiram college; his brother Amzi was vice-president of the University of Indiana, while another brother, Orris, was a professor in Hiram college. A sister was teacher in the Fisk university of Tennessee. Some of the sons were ministers.

Jotham Atwater was one of the first surveyors to lay out the state of Ohio. He afterwards settled in Mantua, Ohio. His brother Amzi, who had previously settled in the same town, was an elder in the newly-formed Disciple church. A sister who married David Pond about the same time, joined the Mormon movement. She, with five of her children, followed the Prophet Joseph Smith, to Missouri, but finally straggled back to her brother's home, who provided for her as long as she lived.

We have in the family several Episcopalian ministers; some Baptists, some Methodists and one Catholic priest. Many Atwaters were educators, professors in colleges, principals of academies and teachers in seminaries. Others were eminent writers. Judge Caleb Atwater was the early historian of Ohio. He was also an author of innumerable essays. His works are often quoted to-day. Some turned to fiction. No doubt many of you have read the interesting books of Mrs. Anne Caroline Mason. She is a sister of the late Richard Mead Atwater. His sons were educated in mining and scientific lines, and, I am proud to say, have been very successful in their chosen fields.

The family, as a rule, have not been blessed with extreme wealth, although three or four have disgraced themselves, according to Andrew Carnegie, having died millionaires. I have visited our people from Nova Scotia to Florida on the eastern coast, through the middle states and up and down the Pacific slope. I found nearly all in comfortable circumstances; very few in extreme poverty. They are an ambitious lot; hard workers; few shirkers.

As the historian of the family, I may say I have given as much time as I could spare for thirty-five years, to endeavor to perpetuate unto posterity the characteristics of the family. Every member has had a standing invitation to send as much of family lore and statistics as he or she desired. What has been sent in I have carefully edited, but very seldom curtailed. So, if the families are not properly represented in the histories, they have only themselves to blame. I have spent many dollars in prepaid envelopes sent to kindred who never had the grace to return an answer. However, let some minor mistake occur and pandemonium reigns. In the second volume is printed the date of birth of a boy before the parents were married. It was a regrettable error. Twelve years afterwards the grandmother called me on the telephone. Her voice trembled with rage. She had just discovered the mistake, and insisted I must call in every book at once. She said the subject of this error was a man grown and she did not know what he would do to me if he ever discovered his disgrace. I am praying that six feet of earth will be over me when that time comes.

I called upon John W. Atwater, of Thomaston, Ga., in March, 1906. He had been a Methodist exhorter for over half a century. He was in bed, and his brother told me he was worn out, a victim of the old-fashioned shouting and ranting preaching, which I hoped had passed away. It was only natural he should ask what church I attended, but when informed I did not attend any, that the Golden Rule was my guide, though I confessed I did not always live up to it, he said he was sorry, and his expression was truly pathetic. He had lived a narrow life, spent in a small sphere, which was as painful for me to comprehend as my liberal ideas were for him to tolerate. I cannot help but believe his teachings brought more fear than comfort.

Prof. W. O. Atwater was one of the leading scientific men of his day. He was connected with Wesleyan college, Middletown, Conn. He experimented for a long period to ascertain what would best maintain the human system. He proved to himself at least, that four ounces of alcohol used daily was beneficial. He was a very temperate man, if not a teetotaller. Yet the W. C. T. U. denounced him from one end of the country to the other. However, being an Atwater, and as stated before about others, having a mind of his own, I do not believe it disturbed him one bit.

Colonel James R. Atwater, of Thomaston, Ga., is another enterprising Atwater. Although his grandfather left North Carolina to migrate further south he developed the old Atwater trait of being an early settler in new territory. Like every other one of his name he made good and became one of the leading citizens of Georgia. He left a good sized family with many descendants. I knew and honored his son James W., whom I visited on two occasions. He told me much of his career. Of course, his fortune was swept away during the Civil war, but his energy predominated, and I found him over eighty years old situated in a large roomy house, surrounded with luxury and comfort and a devoted family. His son James, of whom I speak, made his success in business life as a banker. His city honored him with the office of mayor, his district as senator, and his state as quartermaster general, with the rank of major; he was ten years captain of the Upson Guards, Co. H, Second Infantry, and is now retired with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. He also has had considerable experience as a manufacturer. He stands high in the Masonic ranks.

My own brother, Dorence, was a Union prisoner and after passing through other prisons landed at Andersonville where some of the family reside to-day. He spent twenty-two months there. He was a gifted penman. The Confederate officer told him if he would keep the list of the prisoners who died there it would be exchanged with the federal government. Believing this would never be carried out, he kept a secret list in his coat lining. It numbered nearly 14,000. When he was released he notified the government what he had. Arrangements were made to copy it and Dorence again enlisted as a soldier and was detailed as a clerk in Washington. While the government had copied his rolls it refused to give them back. He notified the war department that if the work was done immediately, it was then June, 1865, he could identify all the graves. With forty letterers and joiners he was sent to Andersonville to do this work. He had to have his own rolls to work from. When he returned the government demanded the rolls and he refused to give them up, claiming them as his own property. He was arrested, court-martialed and sent to states prison at hard labor for eighteen months and stand committed until the rolls were returned. He was there two months when the government, fearing a Congressional investigation, he was discharged without the grace of a pardon. He had been a prisoner of both the south and the north. I may add, years afterward I succeeded in having the court-martial set aside by Congress. Subsequently he said the word soldier made him mad while the sight of a uniform made him froth at the mouth. Becoming disgusted with the United States he spent his life in far-off southern seas and his remains are now buried in his island home of Tahiti.

Many of the family were and are doctors. John Phelps Atwater; who lived in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was a practitioner there. He had foresight and sagacity. Years ago he invested a few thousand dollars in Chicago land. When he died he was reputed to be a millionaire. Dr. David F. Atwater of Springfield, Mass., lived to the ripe old age of 98 years. Besides a comfortable fortune accumulated by himself, his brother bequeathed him over half a million dollars, out of an estate that inventoried over $1,600,000.

Many of the Atwaters lived to be from 90 to over 100 years old, and nearly all so far as I can learn were well preserved at their advanced age.

During the invasion of New Haven by the British in 1779 Russell Atwater was wounded and left for dead, but recovered and was afterward employed by the Emperor Napoleon after the battle of Waterloo, to purchase a tract of land in New York as a refuge, should he escape.

Among our pioneer friends, we find Judge Amzi Atwater who began his career in the dreary wilderness of Ohio. He made a small clearing and put up a little log cabin, struck his axe in a stump and told it to stay there till he brought home a wife, and, Hiawatha like, he posted off through the woods to the next clearing, and tradition says that the bridegroom went on foot through the woods to the little cabin. Soon after this marriage he was elected judge, which position he held for many years. Judge Amzi had quite a passion for rhyming. He made addresses and wrote letters in rhymes, and even put his duns in verse, and found it a successful plan to collect his debts.

A little later on, we find another Judge Atwater, from the southlands, Uncle Edmund, of whom it was said that he touched the earth only in the high places, and he was called the halest, heartiest, and holiest man of his day and generation.

There was dear cousin Thankful, with her Puritan name and Dorcas propensities, who gave to Lois Atwater, her son's wife, a little tape needle, engraved with the initials of her maiden name, with the request that it be handed down to the oldest daughter. Lois gave the needle to her oldest daughter Rhoda, and Rhoda to Julia, and Julia to Annis, who is now Mrs. Frank Pardee, and she has passed on the heirloom to Annis Matilda, in whose possession it is at this time. This one little act of cousin Thankful gives her a personality, and makes her seem a little nearer than most of our relatives of a hundred years ago. The passing down of the tape needle, as an heirloom, calls to mind the old powder gourd owned by Titus Atwater, in 1750, Moses in 1790, then it came into Jehiel Atwater's hands in 1825, and into Edmund W. Atwater's in 1875, and is now owned by Mrs. Mattie Atwater Jenkins, at the venerable age of 169 years—the gourd, not Mrs. Jenkins.

Mary Atwater Spalding, a woman of large and far-reaching ideas, a friend of literary culture, and who has read and traveled much in this country and in Europe. Lucy Atwater Bishop, who was a beautiful type of an ideal New England wife and mother.

Other characters were Myron L. Atwater, who was blind from birth, but who, with help from Helen Keller, made such wonderful success as an editor. Of Henry L. Atwater, who during the Civil war, shod horses for a whole regiment of cavalry. Of William Cutler Atwater, who was appointed bearer of dispatches to the army at New London, going from New Haven on horseback with dispatches hidden in his boots. Asaph Atwater, the pioneer schoolmaster, who taught the young ideas to shoot in the log cabin schoolhouse, and ruled the youngsters with an iron rod, but to his credit be it said he taught them something. Of Henry Harrison Atwater, who was at one time leading operator of the great Western Union Telegraph Co., through whose hands passed many of the messages relating to President Lincoln's assassination. Of Caleb, the historian and antiquarian, who is said to have had almost an encyclopedic mind, and who was sent by President Jackson as a commissioner to the Winnebago Indians. Of Ernest Atwater, who gave his young life to the missionary work and who, with his entire family, were massacred during the Boxer rebellion. Wilson, son of Moses, a man of such piety that it was said he walked with God. And such men as George, David Fisher, and James Chaplin Atwater, all eminently successful in business, and who at their deaths made public bequests amounting to many thousands of dollars.

The compiler of the Atwater History has for many years searched far and near to learn something of the career of Enos Atwater, who some time in the latter part of the seventeenth century left his father's farm in Cheshire, Conn., to locate in Virginia and North Carolina. He came of good stock. His brothers, Asaph and Heman, served in the Revolutionary war. His sister, Mehitable, married Eli Bronson of the neighboring town of Waterbury and raised a distinguished family. His brother, Heman, acquired from his father 100 acres of land in the town of Southington. This was in 1784, the price being 251 pounds. Here were established the "Atwater Mills," which have been in continuous operation up to 1924, although not in the same location. His sister Keziah married Amos Rice, while Anne married Nathan Gaylord, both farmers who lived and died in Cheshire, Conn.

Asaph married Ann Dibble. He went to Torrington, Conn., some thirty miles from his father's home. Here he reared a large family. He evidently had inherited some of the pioneer blood of his ancestry for he started for the sparsely settled west in its earliest days. In this connection the writer has never been able to trace his movements. By mere accident he learned of the existence of some of his descendents now living in Pennsylvania.

Moses was of the fifth generation. His father was Enos, who married Hannah Moss and had the military rank of captain of militia in 1776. His grandfather was John, who married Elizabeth Mix. They settled upon a farm in Cheshire, Conn., where they lived all their lives. The writer knows its location, but all evidence of the buildings thereon have long since been obliterated.

His great grandfather was also John, who married Abigail Mansfield. He left New Haven to settle in Wallingford on a farm owned by his brother Joshua. This John was a son of the pioneer David.

This shows that Moses had the most substantial ancestry New England afforded. The best blood of the nation was in his veins. I have tried in vain to find some reason why Enos should have gone to the then far off south. Possibly he may have joined some sailing expedition that landed in Virginia. I have read carefully and studied conditions in Cheshire to find if there was any conceit-ed movement of the young men to leave home, but only found scattering incidences, few and far between. It may be a fact that Enos was given a horse, and with his few belongings rolled up journeyed leisurely through the states of Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland into Virginia, where no doubt he found employment on some farm. Possibly it was the daughter of his employer that made it an attractive proposition to settle nearby, where his children were born. This was undoubtedly in Virginia for it is a matter of tradition that Titus, with his wife riding the same horse, came from Virginia to make their home in North Carolina.

Who did Titus marry? We are told there was an Elaphalet Atwater, and who knows what became of him? He was, no doubt, a brother of Titus.

I have found some satisfaction in the years of search and study. When I first took up untying the ramifications of the family the only clue I had was that Enos went south and located in Orange County, North Carolina. At that time I had never heard of any Atwater south of Washington. Then I learned of the election to Congress of John Wilbur Atwater. Correspondence followed and I was told the descendants all traced back to Moses. I confess not much progress has been made since, except I have practically gathered as a unit nearly all of the progeny of Moses. It is possible Enos' grave and that of his wife might be found with a stone telling dates of death, dates of birth, and her maiden name. The forefathers of Enos were very particular to erect headstones to departed members, and this reverence of family was a trait of nearly all of his brothers and sisters as I have witnessed in visiting the cemeteries where their kindred are buried.

Enos was baptised in the Congregational faith. This was true of all of the Atwaters in the first century of their establishment in this country. David, Joshua and Ann, the immigrants, left their home because of religious persecution. Yet as soon as they reached these friendly shores they helped establish a creed of intolerable hardships. Everybody was obliged to contribute and participate in its success. This yoke of oppression may have been a factor in driving Enos to seek relief if he did not believe in its tenets.

At any rate, the Atwaters have never been followers of traditions. They have had minds of their own and have followed the bent of their convictions, even if it were against popular sentiment and peril to life and fortune. So we find them associating themselves with new creeds as they developed, repudiating the old established church that the first settlers adopted, while many are believers in the golden rule and have cast aside both church and creed.

The southern branch, as a rule, are regular attendants of their chosen religion. We learn they are mostly of the Methodist persuasion. This is probably more true of the women than men. Credit for this is given to the wife of Moses Atwater. Her name was Amy Wilson and it is said she was of Irish parentage. However, it is told she was a woman of great patience, piety and persuasion and by instilling into the minds of her children and grandchildren her deep religious convictions sent them out into the world to preach her doctrines to mankind. We shall not take from Amy Wilson anything due her. She undoubtedly was as good as gold. But, before she married into the family, there had been molded and inherited a foundation that, as it matured, must have developed the best thought and moral character of its subject.

A VISIT TO LENHAM, ENGLAND.

BY MARGARET ATWATER JONES.

I went to Lenham, England, from London on July 6, 1926. It was an in and out day, which added charm to the beautiful country we went through. The rolling Kentish country with its farms, its great hop fields, its little villages, each with its stone church and picturesque cottages with the lovely cottage gardens gave one a succession of beautiful pictures long to be remembered. The "hedgerows of England" are so often spoken of—there is a "finished" look to the country which impresses one. Now and then we passed superb great oaks with perhaps a flock of sheep or cattle resting in the shade. It was poppy time and occasionally we passed a field which was a blaze of color.

The Square, Lenham, Kent.

Upon reaching Lenham I went directly to the Vicarage. I was received with not too much cordiality for I soon discovered that Atwaters or representatives of the Atwater family had imposed in times past upon the Vicar's hospitality and he was rather "fed up" with them. There was a family by the name of Thompson the Vicar could not say enough against. They had dined with him and supped with him and taken up a great deal of his valuable time and they had not even left with him a "contribution for his parish." He soon discovered that I had no idea of imposing upon him and he thawed and was most cordial. He got out the old records which he kept at the Vicarage and showed me the inscriptions of births, baptisms, marriages and deaths of Ye Olde High House, Lenham Kent.

Atwaters. On the first page of one book was the record of the baptism of Robert Atwater in 1588. He took me over the beautiful garden and told me I should go to "Chapel Farm" where the Atwaters were said to have lived, but warned me that the Scotch family by the name of Barr now living there would probably not receive me very cordially as they too had been "bored to death." I took luncheon, and a very good luncheon it was, at the "Dog and Bear." Then I visited the church and spent some time there and in the church yard. The pulpit was interesting. I found no grave stones bearing the Atwater name, but many were so worn by time and weather that the inscriptions could not be read. There may be Atwaters buried there.

Later I took a taxi to "Chapel Farm." It is quite a little distance from Lenham center. Upon arriving and going through the walled gardens to the front door, I rang the bell and I asked for Mrs. Barr of the maid who came to the door. She soon appeared and I said, "I understand that you have been bored to death with Atwaters." She said, "Who told you so? Come right in." She claimed that I was the first rightfully bearing the name of Atwater by birth who had been there since they owned the farm. She certainly was most cordial and showed me everything of interest about the place. The oak doors, folded linen pattern, fire place, beams, etc., black with age. The lovely view off over the valley from the side door. The old house itself mellow with age outside and in. I was interested in the lovely old tiles on the outside of the ell. I had a really delightful call.

I drove back to the center and went into several shops trying to get all the local color I could. I called on Mr. James Hatch who was said to know Lenham history, but I discovered very little of interest. I could not find that there were any Atwaters or Atwater descendants in Lenham at the present time.

Lenham, in the old coaching days, was a place of some importance. Horses were changed there on the way to Dover. Then with the incoming of railroads it dwindled. Now it is coming back to prosperity again because of the automobile.

I had a delightful day at Lenham and a very interesting one, seeing with my own eyes the scenes looked upon and probably loved by my ancestors. I wanted very much to stay and make sketches all around Lenham and I intend to do so before I die.

* Russell Atwater, Conn. S 28238. Resident of Norfolk, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., in 1832. Pensioned by Act of Congress, July 14, 1832.

Wounded at New Haven, July 5, 1779, during engagement when Gov. Tryon attacked that place. Was struck in the breast by a musket ball and was presumed to be mortally wounded. The wound healed in 18 months. Service in the company of Capt. Lucius Tuttle, of Cheshire, near New Haven.

A letter from Russell Atwater to the Commissioner of Pensions reveals that an application was made in 1829 and certain papers were sent to the President who forwarded them to the War Office. These papers could not be found in 1832. One was from "an officer commanding the Company in which he served when wounded" and the other from Dr. Munson of New Haven, the first Surgeon attending after the wound was received.

1832, Feb. 10, Lucius Tuttle, Ensign of Militia belonging to Cheshire July, 1779, deposed to the landing of the British at New Haven, July 5, 1779, and that he with his company proceeded to New Haven. Russell Atwater was a member of the company, and as remembered, was about 17 years old. "He was severely wounded by a ball which struck him on the lower part of the collar bone," etc. "I was standing next to him when he was wounded and the circumstance is vivid and fresh in my recollection." Tuttle "will be 83 years old in 2 months from this time."

In the New York Advertiser for October 12, 1825, appeared an article, headed "A Novel Sight", which says, in part:

"A vessel has arrived at this port with emigrants from Norway. The vessel is very small, measuring, as we understand, only about 360 Norwegian lasts, or forty-five American tons, and brought fifty-three passengers, male and female, all bound for Orleans County, where an agent who came over some time since, purchased a tract of land."

The sloop "Restaurationen", the Mayflower of the North, sailed out of Stavanger harbor on America's Independence day, July 4th, 1825. Whether the party selected that day for their departure by chance or with a full realization of its significance we have not been told. After a perilous and romantic voyage through the British Channel and by the way of the Island Madeira, they reached New York on October 9th, 1825. Every one of the passengers that went on board at Stavanger landed in good health and spirits, and their number had been increased on the way by the arrival of the "Sloop baby"—a daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Lars Larson. She was baptized Margaret Allen in honor of a Quaker lady of London, who had befriended her father. She developed into a woman of rare beauty, culture and refinement. In 1851 she married John Atwater, of Rochester, N. Y., who became a prominent publisher at Chicago. She died at an advanced age, loved and respected by all who knew her.

And what were the circumstances that led to the sailing of the famous sloop party?

In 1807 Lars Larson, who was born at Stavanger, September 23, 1787, and served as a ship carpenter in the Danish navy during the Napoleonic wars, was captured by the British and confined in a London prison till 1814. After his release he entered the employ of Margaret Allen, a prominent Quaker lady, who had taken an interest in him during his imprisonment and had converted him to the Quaker faith. In 1816 he returned to Norway, where he, with others who had been captives at London and had embraced the Quaker faith, began proselyting among their neighbors, with the result that a Society of Friends was organized at Stavanger. This society never grew large, but still exists, with a membership of some two hundred. Great enthusiasm and interest was aroused, but how to get to the land of promise with the limited means at their command was a big problem for most of the people. Lars Larson solved the problem. He had acquired some property, which he now sold and, with some assistance from five others, bought a little sloop for eighteen hundred dollars in Norwegian money. The captain, Lars Olson, and the mate, Erickson, were engaged by him.

After the arrival of the sloop at New York, Lars Larson did not accompany the party to Kendall, but located at Rochester, N. Y., where he became a prosperous builder of canal boats. He died as the result of an accident in 1845. He was a most worthy man, whose memory should be revered by all his people in America. His home at Rochester was always open to Norwegian immigrants, hundreds of whom stopped there and received help and advice.

Rev. A. H. Hancock, Pastor Methodist Church, Chattahoochee, Fla., says:

"I first met and knew W. E. Atwater at the Tallahassee District Conference held at Chattahoochee, Fla., May the 6th A. D. 1915. Since that time I have been closely associated with him, both as a personal friend and as a worker in the church.

"He is recognized as one of the very best, efficient and most faithful lay workers in the Florida Conference. He has been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South for fifty-seven years and, has served his church in almost every office. He has served as Chairman of the Board of Stewards for thirty years and, as Sunday School Superintendent for thirty-five years. Has been elected by his Church and gone as a delegate six times to represent his Church at Annual conference and, ten times or more to District Conference as a delegate in the interest of his Church.

"Very few men have served their Church, their Master and their fellow-man so well as he, and none better. His success as a Christian has been a marvel to his friends and neighbors, but we are beginning to learn that the secret of his success as a Christian leader among all classes and ages and, especially the young folk, and, in the Sunday School is in his knowledge of the Bible and his consistent life of prayer, in his home, Church and Community.

"He is a man of high moral, civic and religious pride. Nothing but the best pleases him and nothing but the best will he have. His life picture is best seen in his home and in the life of his seven splendid children, all of whom rise up and call him blessed.

"The northern section of the land of flowers has been made better by the life and influence of this Godly man, and, we who know him and love him most stand to honor him and to say with his children blessed art thou."

2092. Myron L., b. Jan. 7, 1893. His is a sad story of blighted hopes and ambitions, and high courage, as the opportunities for the blind are so limited. For the past several years he has been seeking for some form of work that he might do to earn his living and that time might not hang so heavily on his hands. Since his father's death he has been practically without employment, as it was impossible for him to continue the editorial work without assistance. He makes his home with his brother-in-law, Mr. Howe, of Lakeport, Ca. His education has been gained through his finger tips, with the embossed reading for the blind, and by others reading aloud to him. He is fond of literature, music and travel.

1351. Ernest E., son of Myron; m. Nov. 24, 1892, Zadie I. Winslow, b. Sept. 9, 1864, d. Apr. 4, 1924. Dependent on his own resources at the early age of thirteen, Mr. Atwater has made his way unaided since that time. Procuring his education in the public schools of Indiana, and the Valpraiso Normal, and later from the older school of experience. For a time he worked in a photographic studio in Chicago, and later assisted his brother Eugene in the work and various photographic experiments. Leaving his brother, he accepted a position with the C. H. Dean Co., a stationery supply firm, continuing with them for three years, and occupying several positions of trust before he was twenty. Moving to Nebraska while the country was in the making, he saw it develop from a barren prairie to one of the richest agricultural districts in the country. Here he was for a time in the employ of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Co., then engaged in merchandising. He married in the fall of 1892, Zadie I. Winslow, who was a descendant of Edwin Winslow, of Mayflower fame, and of Daniel Boone of Kentucky. She was a teacher, a lover of literature and all forms of nature, and a thorough student. To this union one daughter, Nellie Joy, was born. In 1902 they moved to a beautiful country home at Bordeaux, near Chadron, Neb., where they resided until her death in 1924.

Early in 1925 he and his dau. moved to Corning, California, where they have a store, being partners in business, and have a lovely home, each being devoted to the other. Mr. Atwater's life has always been marked by that firmness of mind, truthfulness and fair dealing, which have ever been characteristic of the family. He has a keen sense of humor, a gift for narration, and is an entertaining conversationalist.

1420. H. Clarkson, son of Henry Russell, was educated at St. John's Military School, Salina, Kansas; Kansas State University, Lawrence, Kansas; Seabury Divinity School, Faribault, Minnesota. Ordained Deacon in Grace Cathedral, Topeka, Kansas, by Bishop Frank Rosebrook Millsbaugh, D. D., Trinity Sunday, June 2, 1901; Priest (ditto) Feast of the Ascension, May 8, 1902; Archdeacon Northern Kansas 1902-5, Rector St. Peter's, Pittsburg, Kansas, 1905-7; St. Peter's, Detroit, 1907-1918; St. Matthias', Detroit, September, 1918. Built churches at Cedar Vale, Blue Rapids and Washington, all in Kansas. Married to Mary Ellen Cheney, teacher in the College of the Sisters of Bethany, Topeka, Kansas, in College Chapel, by Bishop Millsbaugh, on Feast of the Circumcision (Jan. 1st), 1902.

Mr. Atwater writes, "I wonder if you have had from me such information as was mine from my father during his lifetime as traditional with the family. As I have it from him it is as follows:

"Russell Atwater received from the crown a grant of land known as the 'Russell

Grant' and colonized it. He was an ardent patriot while his brothers were tories. When the British attacked New Haven he was shot through the left lung and reported as dead but recovered and afterwards served as a member of Continental Congress.

"His sons were Phineas and Henry Smith. The latter, my grandfather, was an Episcopal clergyman and held parishes at Kent, White Plains and New Haven. I am told that at New Haven his picture hangs in the sacristy of St. Paul's church. Dr. Bennett recently told me that he had the 'preaching bands' which he used to wear and which he found in a prayer book in the chancel. He had only one son, Henry Russell, my father, and he in turn had but one child, myself; two girls having died in infancy."

HENRY WELLESLEY ATWATER.

1431. Henry Wellesley, son of John Elisha; m. Nov. 4, 1878, Mary Elizabeth Pratt, of New Ross, N. S. He d. Oct. 31, 1925. He was educated at King's College, Windsor, N. S.; ordained deacon 1875, at St. Luke's Pro-Cathedral, Halifax, N. S.; priest, 1877, by the Bishop of Nova Scotia. Appointed (1) Incumbent of St. Bartholomew, Louisburg, C. B.; (2) Incumbent of Christ Church, New Ross, N. S.; (3) Rector of St. John's, Port Medway, N. S.; (4) Incumbent of St. John Baptist's church, Barbadoes, B. W. I.; (5) Principal of Gordon's Indian Boarding School and Priest-in-charge of the Mission of St. Luke, Gordon's Indian Reserve, Sask., Canada.

EXTRACT FROM KING'S COLLEGE RECORD, ALUMNI NUMBER,
FEBRUARY, 1926.

The Reverend Canon Henry Wellesley Atwater, Principal of Gordon's Indian Residential School, and Priest in charge of St. Luke's Church, Gordon's Reserve, Punnichy, Sask., in the Diocese of Qu'Appelle, passed to his rest on Oct. 31st, aged 74 years. The late Canon was a theological student at King's College, from which he went to be ordained Deacon in 1875 and to take charge of the parish of Louisburg, N. S. He was ordained priest in 1877, and in 1879 was given charge of Port Medway. After two years in Barbadoes (1883-84) he went to Manitoba and entered upon educational and Indian work, rising to the position which he filled until shortly before his lamented death. For upward of forty years he carried on a self-sacrificing and devoted work which was recognized by his being made a Canon of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle, of which Diocese he was the Senior Priest by ordination. He labored under pioneer conditions with all the sturdy persistence of a true pioneer and lived to see his dreams of a great development in the West come true. Commenting on his passing, the Ven. Arch Deacon Knowles, of Regina, Sask., said: "Canon Atwater was one of the outstanding figures of the province. His knowledge of the West was extensive and his work was great. He was greatly beloved by the Indians among whom he served." He was imbued with the spirit of a missionary and labored with unremitting zeal. His death leaves a vacancy in the ranks of missionary workers sent out by King's. May many King's men be moved to follow in his steps and take up their share of the burden of the great missionary enterprise of Holy Church.

(From Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record.)

The announcement is made that Almon Byron Atwater, for many years the directing and advising head of the Grand Trunk Railway lines in Michigan, has retired. Mr. Atwater is long past the scriptural age, and has spent a long life-time in the railroad business. He is one of the few surviving pioneers. His railroad service began with the early eastern short lines, which were gradually consolidated into the systems of great mileage, and was followed up by experiences in the construction of railroads which have come to be so great a part of the transportation fabric of this section of the country that the public really seems to believe that they never had a beginning, but always were in existence.

It is more than fifty years since Mr. Atwater had an engineer's hand in the making of the Canada Southern road from the Niagara frontier to the Detroit River gateway. With the exception of a four-year period with the Michigan Central system, Mr. Atwater's career has been almost wholly with the Grand Trunk system in Michigan. It is rather interesting to go over the things that have happened to that system since he became assistant to the president thereof with authority over the American lines. The main line of the railroad, across the state, has been double-tracked. The old Pontiac, Oxford & Northern Railroad, which was a sort of transportation orphan, has been taken over and made a fairly useful accessory to the business of its section. The Detroit & Toledo freight line, owned in conjunction with another railroad, has been made one of the great coal-carrying arteries of the southern part of the state. The line from Durand to Saginaw has been made a valuable feeder to the business of the Saginaw Valley, which it distinctly was not in the days that Mr. Burt and Mr. Wright controlled it. Very important and necessary additions—while not enough—have been made to the terminal facilities of the Grand Trunk at Detroit, while much valuable railroad property has been added at Battle Creek, Flint, Lansing and other important points.

The financial condition of the Grand Trunk Railway has always been such that American and Canadian managers had their own tough times in getting the money out of the English board of directors for any important improvement or extension. After the English gave their resident managers control the situation was not much better. Almost immediately after American continental control supervened, the Canadian movement, which has culminated in government ownership of the Grand Trunk was initiated and budgetary generosity continued to be limited. It was in such a set of surroundings that Mr. Atwater, himself thoroughly conversant with the limitations of expenditure, had to do what he could toward the development of the property of which he was an officer in some proportion to the growth of the business of the state. And it is to be recorded on his retirement from service in the evening of his days that he did very well indeed. The record that he has left behind him is one of a useful life, wholly spent in the making and improvement of American transportation facilities, and the very greatest part of it spent in and for Michigan. For that, those who approach the subject of railroad construction and development in any frame of mind other than the hydrophobic one which has lately been politically popular, cannot fail to appreciate the really helpful influence that Mr. Atwater's life work has been in the up-building of this state, its industrial centers and its agricultural areas.

However, none of these things, interesting as they are, has to do with the future of Mr. Atwater, who is the text of this article. He has done his day's work with honor, intelligence and industry, and his neighbors and fellow citizens can only wish him happiness and joy in the evening of his life.

1656. John Wilbur, son of John Todd; m. April 24, 1867, Frances, dau. of Wm. Peebles and Anna Wildes. For many years he made agriculture a specialty. In 1890 he leased the farm and moved to Kingsville, O., entering into the employ of the McCormick Co., of Chicago, Ill. For several years was also engaged in business in Cleveland. Later he became general agent for the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Co., of Ashtabula, Ohio. He d. very suddenly, Feb. 7, 1914, while visiting in Cincinnati, Ohio.

2934. Jahaza, son of Moses; m. Nov. 11, 1833, Sally Stone. Lived in Orange county, N. C.

He was born and reared at the old Atwater homestead in Orange county, about six miles from Chapel Hill, N. C. He had a common school education such as conditions permitted in those days, as there were few school accommodations in that part of the country. He was married to Sally Stone on Nov. 11, 1833. She was a woman of strong character, sound principles and was loved by all who knew her. They had four children. The last child was Sidney who died when a youth, soon after returning from active service in the Civil War.

Jahaza, one of the best types of Christian gentlemen, was a zealous conscientious, faithful class leader at Mt. Pleasant church for years. Class leaders were usually selected from men whom the church members considered true leaders, those in whom they had complete confidence as being able and staunch Christians ready for any emergency or condition that might arise. He was full of wit and humor, always enjoying a hearty laugh. He showed his feelings plainly, being quite emotional at times. People loved him for his big, kind heart and fairness in all things. He was a Whig in politics, but did not seem to care to hold public offices. Still he always associated himself with those things which he believed were right for common good and the elevation of humanity. He proved himself a good master to his slaves, very kind and lenient. His wife, a tall, slender woman, was also kind but very strict with the slaves, and oftentimes told her husband if he didn't see that they "toed the mark," that she would. They loved her but knew that she meant "business" when a command or request was made. The children were given as good educations as was possible. During religious services he oftentimes shouted, thus giving thanks to God in his own characteristic way. He was a large, well built man with gray eyes and dark hair, and firm, kindly mouth. He died rather suddenly at the home of his son, John W. Atwater, while in the prime of life. His wife died several years prior to this.

Johnston, m. Adeline Quackenbush, sister of William Quackenbush, a noted educator of North Carolina, to whose memory the people of Scotland county erected a beautiful monument on Court House Square at Laurinburg, N. C. He was one of the faculty of Bingham School in this state for a number of years before this.

Annie Amy, b. July 20, 1834; m. William H. Turrentine, b. Aug. 23, 1822; d. at his home in Orange county, N. C., Oct. 6, 1884. At the age of nineteen he embraced religion, soon joined the Methodist church, and continued a consistent member to the end of his days. Quiet in temperament, sincere in his speech, clear in his convictions, modest in mien, brave in his conduct, unswerving in his integrity, he won and maintained the high regard and unqualified confidence of all who knew him. He frequently filled the office of superintendent of the Sabbath school, was for some time a steward of the Church and was appointed afterward class leader, which position he held till his death. One of the most eloquent testimonies to his piety is given in the words from his home: "He was devoted to his family, especially is he missed in his devotional exercises around the family altar."

2936. Jehiel, son of Moses; m. Dec. 10, 1840, Martha C., dau. of Nathaniel Warren and Sallie Shaw, b. Aug. 10, 1824. He was a farmer at Chapel Hill, N. C., and d. Jan. 17, 1876.

His father died when he was quite a youth. He was left to manage his own and his mother's estates and he proved himself capable of the undertaking. His mother lived with him the remainder of her life. He was a notable peacemaker. He was a big-hearted man, and delighted to relieve the distressed and unfortunate. At his burial a man was heard to say "The poor man's friend is gone."

He lived in Orange county, N. C., near the first Atwater settlement. He descended from an ancestry representing the best yeomanry of the Old North State. He had a large vigorous body, strong mind, clear thought and sound judgment, positive conviction and unswerving determination. His even balanced temperament avoided extremes in thought, word and deed. His program of conduct could have been expressed in the motto, "A day's work in a days time." His well balanced gift of heart and mind made him a leader in his community. As county commissioner, as state legislator, and temperance advocate, school official and church worker, he occupied a position standing unequivocally for what he thought to be right and for the public welfare. He was a public spirited citizen. Throughout his long life he exemplified the sterling traits of character represented by the worthy reputation of the Atwater name.

The deceased was eighty-seven years of age, and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Antoinette Respass Atwater; one son, Capt. James R. Atwater, and six daughters, Mrs. J. Henry Smith, of Griffin; Mrs. Fred Farris, of Atlanta; Mrs. George R. Turpin, of Macon; Mrs. William P. Leonard, of Talbotton; Mrs. Roland W. Spain, of New York city, and Mrs. A. J. King of Macon.

Besides being one of the oldest and wealthiest of Thomaston citizens, he was one of the most prominent, influential and highly esteemed. Not only did he stand high in the affections of his home people but wherever he was known men respected and loved him. A citizen of another city who is one of the most prominent men in the state and who was a business associate of Captain Atwater's said of him: "Few men have lived to better purpose, or have had higher regard of their friends and acquaintances than Mr. Atwater."

Captain Atwater was a man of strong convictions and once he took a stand in a matter he was almost unshakable. It is said of him that above all things he despised a hypocrite and hated all manner of shams. He was also a man who loved his friends and would stop at nothing to aid them. There are many who owe their business success to his assistance and counsel.

Captain Atwater served through the civil war with distinction. He was noted for his bravery in battle and his efficiency in military tactics, being made captain of five different companies to perfect their organization. Many of his comrades who are still living gratefully bear testimony to his valorous record.

After the conflict ended he was active in the politics of Upson county serving as county commissioner for twelve years, during which terms of service he was one of the first men in the state to refuse a permit for a cross road saloon.

Captain Atwater was also one of the founders of the R. E. Lee Institute of Thomaston, and for twenty-three years acted as chairman for the board of trustees for that well known institution.

For years Captain Atwater was a leader in every movement looking to the upbuilding and betterment of his town and county.

He was brought up on a farm and followed farming as a vocation nearly all his life. He was educated in the Bingham school, High Hill Academy, and graduated from the Graham Institute. He moved to and made his home at Pittsboro, Chatham county, in 1861, shortly after his marriage. He was a member of the state constitutional convention in 1875. He was nominated for representative in Congress by the Populists in 1892, and again in 1894 when he was elected to the Fifty-fourth Congress by 18,662 votes, against 14,335 for Charles M. Cooke, democrat. He was re-elected in 1896, serving from Mar. 4, 1895, to Mar. 3, 1899.

He was assigned to the committee on labor. He was generally called "Uncle Buck." A cleaner handed man never quit the nation's capitol to render his account to a waiting constituency. He was not a politician; political life did not appeal to him. He shrank from the limelight smitten by its intolerable glare. The city and its crowded streets depressed him. He longed for his quiet country home; for his broad acres; the hush and stillness, the solitudes of the solemn hills. He was born among the hills and he loved them. And so he came again to live among his beloved hills to spend his declining years in the joy of their fellowship and to sleep beneath their friendly shadow when life's long day was done. He was a member of the M. E. church south. After his return to private life he spent most of his time with his son at Chapel Hill. For a number of years he taught a class of university students at Sunday school and succeeded to an unusual degree in quickening and holding their interest in the world of life. He d. Mar. 12, 1911. His wife survived him until Feb. 7, 1917. She was a devout Christian woman, a Methodist of the old school, and highly esteemed by all who knew her. Her declining years were spent with her son at Chapel Hill.

2953. Carney Compton, son of Jahaza; m. 1862, Amelia A. Baldwin. He d. Jan. 18, 1878. As a man he was distinguished for energy of character. Under his management "the desert places were made to rejoice and blossom as the rose," barren fields returned remunerative crops to reward him for his pains and the richer soil multiplied his gains. He was conspicuous for the integrity of his character. He was converted at fourteen years of age and continued membership in the church through life, though he shrank from any official position in it. As a Christian he was sincere in his belief and consistent in his life. Mrs. Atwater died at the home of her son-in-law, Rev. S. B. Turrentine, in Greensboro, N. C., March 18, 1907. As a wife she was a model of loving devotion and fidelity, and when left by bereavement to walk the lone path of widowhood she carried with quiet grace and dignity the burdens and responsibilities of her household. So well did she meet the trials of this difficult sphere of life that her sorrow became a crown of glory, and her children rise up to call her blessed in token of her motherly devotions. For several years prior to her death she was a great sufferer. Pain was her constant companion and physical helplessness imposed upon her the trial of being dependent upon the ministering care of her friends. But her great afflictions were borne with such a quiet submission and her strength of such gentle trust that her weakness became her strength and turned the ministry of her friends into a service of joy. In the home of her daughter, where she received unflinching devotion and care, she was the light of the household. No murmurs jarred the family peace, and no shadow ever darkened her room of suffering. Her last days were filled with weariness and pain.

C., where he was a farmer, and held the office of the justice of the peace. Answering the call of his country he served in the confederate army as orderly sergeant and to the end of his life loved the comradeship of the "old veterans," often attending their reunions. After the war he moved to Chatham county where he spent the greater part of his life. He joined the Methodist church in early life at Cedar Grove. He was most loyal to his Lord and church; a strong, constant friend to ministers; called himself his pastor's assistant and it was true. He was far-seeing, clear cut in his processes of thought and of a philosophic turn of mind. One writer said of him: "I have always regarded Mr. Atwater as one of the most genuine Christians that I have ever known. He was ripe and ready for the garner. Doubtless he had his defects, but all in all, I have known very few men who stood out and above the multitude as distinctly for Christ as he did. The spiritual stream of his life ran smooth and deep, and he never allowed the straws that floated upon the surface to disturb the serenity of its depths."

Mr. Bynum was a man always interested in the good of his country and church. Mrs. Bynum was unusually timid and retiring, yet won the love and admiration of all who knew her. She delighted in helping any in need or suffering. She was proverbially known as "the widows' friend." Her only son lives in California.

Mr. Bynum was a typical old-time southern gentleman, his home a typical southern country home, and his wife a typical housewife and mother. They always kept open house, the guest chamber was always in readiness, and the meals always planned for some possible friend who might drop in. It was the preacher's home and they were the preacher's friends.

Mr. Bynum was a man of unusual executive ability, a very successful business man, prominent in all phases of church work. For years he was superintendent of two Sunday schools, holding one in the morning and the other, four miles distant, in the afternoon. He was easily the leading man in his community and undoubtedly served more people than any other man of his day. In all his affairs and undertakings his devoted and affectionate wife was with him, a true helpmate indeed.

Cornelia Warren, b. Jan. 19, 1872; m. Dec. 27, 1899, Garland O. Green, a Methodist minister. He d. Sept. 24, 1903; one son, Garland O., b. Apr. 21, 1901; (2) June, 1912, Wm. Scaton Rives. They live in Raleigh, N. C. She was educated in Greensboro College for Women. After teaching for a while in her home town, she was happily married to Rev. Garland O. Green, of the North Carolina Conference. To them were born two beautiful boys. Into this home death came and took away the husband and father, and the baby boy. It was then that the frail little woman, who up to this time had been unusually sheltered from hardships, took up the burden of life and entered the business world with a determination that spelled success for her. Being an unusually sweet spirited woman of fine personality, strong force of character, and a sincere Christian, she has made friends wherever known. A few years ago she accepted a responsible position in the Methodist Orphanage, at Raleigh, N. C.

2959. John Nathaniel, son of Jehiel; m. Jan. 3, 1883, Lillie Gannon. They live in Raleigh, N. C.

He is a man of unquestionable character, always standing firm for right and honorable living. In earlier life he lost one arm which has handicapped him along the line of life for which he seemed most fitted. Having been a salesman for many years he was always popular with his customers. He is a genial, cheerful Christian man, always fond of children and never failing to interest them. Mrs. Atwater, the eldest daughter of Rev. W. C. Gannon, of the North Carolina conference, is a graduate of Greensboro College for Women. She is a woman of unusual intelligence and refinement, and a staunch Christian. She was a teacher before her marriage—and since her children are grown and all married, she has fallen back to her first love, that of the school room. Her teaching is thorough and far-reaching, instilling in her pupils high ideals and illuminating the path of those in search of knowledge.

2960. Martha V., dau. of Jehiel; m. Sept. 3, 1903, Rev. J. W. Jenkins of the North Carolina conference, M. E. church south. He d. July 4, 1906. She was educated in Greensboro Woman's College, Greensboro, N. C. Throughout her whole life there was an earnest desire to do some kind of mission work. Discouraged by her friends on account of her delicate health the idea and ambition still clung to her. She felt that she must do something in a worth while way, as she walked along life's road. When, without any effort on her part, she was elected as first matron of the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh, N. C., she accepted, believing that her opportunity had come. Later, when she gave her hand in marriage to Rev. J. W. Jenkins, founder and superintendent of the orphanage, she knew that this was her life work, and together they worked with unceasing labor until, from a feeble beginning, the orphanage had grown into proportions that promised perpetuity. Then Mr. Jenkins laid down his beautiful life, and bound more closely than ever to the product of their united efforts, she has mothered the little orphan children who have been denied the love and care of fathers and mothers, and brought to them the light and joy of real home life.

Slight, small, frail in body, but great in soul, Mattie Atwater Jenkins has given her whole life for the happiness of others. With a sympathetic mind, a hand skilled in helpfulness, a heart that loves wisely, an unusual measure of ability in managing and controlling she has shared the hopes and heartaches of hundreds of boys and girls who delight to call her mother, and in whose lives "Miss Mattie" is a beacon light. She d. Oct. 28, 1925.

2961. James Bobbitt, son of Jehiel; m. Nov. 17, 1878, Nellie Eastwood Page. He is a farmer, merchant and cotton buyer. From childhood Mr. Atwater has been an indefatigable and conscientious worker. Handicapped by frail health in his early young manhood, he worked on amid difficulties. After taking a business course he became, when quite young, bookkeeper for the Odell Manufacturing Co. at his home. From that time on he has filled responsible positions in church, state and business, representing his county in the legislature and his church in every important position that a layman can hold. Not only is Mr. Atwater loved by his home people, but is respected and esteemed by all who come in contact with him. He is a man who has the courage of his convictions and while unusually sweet spirited, is still almost unshakable in his beliefs. There is nothing he will not do, no sacrifice he will not make to aid his friends.

He has been the leader in every movement looking to the uplift of his town, county and state. Mr. Atwater married Miss Nell Page, who comes of a distinguished and representative family. She is a cousin and foster sister of the ambassador, Hon. Walter Page. They have eight children, four of whom are living. The oldest son volunteered in the world war.

He received an academic education in county schools in Chatham, and took a business course at Eastman National Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Spent most of his life at Bynum, his present home, serving first the Bynum Manufacturing Co., cotton manufacturers, as bookkeeper, later bookkeeper and general manager, for the J. M. Odell Manufacturing Co., operating cotton mill and general store. Now engaged in mercantile business and operating roller mill and ginnery. In public matters he has served his county as county commissioner, member of board of education, representative in the state senate, member of the "Local Exemption Board" in 1917-'18, and "Chairman of County Board of Equalization" under "New Valuation Act," 1919. In church relations he belongs to Southern Methodist church, serving as steward, trustee, district steward, Sunday School superintendent and member of North Carolina Conf. S. S. Board. Like most of his kinsmen, he also owns a farm and delights in agriculture, hog and cattle raising.

Atwater writes of him as follows: "For many years he was one of the community's leading citizens and a most successful farmer, living near his father's home in Chatham county. He united with the Methodist Episcopal church in early boyhood, at old Cedar Grove church, at which place he remained a consistent member the rest of his life; was for many years a steward and a faithful teacher in his Sunday school. He was of a jovial disposition, always looking on the bright side of life; beloved and respected by all who knew him. He was attending services at his church on Aug. 5, 1908, when the congregation was called to prayer, volunteers to ask God's blessing upon the meeting that day were called for. I think he was the second person to respond, and I shall always remember the last words he uttered at the close of his prayer when he said, "and may we all meet in heaven." He was taken violently ill and carried out of the church by myself and others. He died on the grounds in a few minutes, before the services of a physician could be had and was buried there the next day.

 He was left an orphan when quite young, but with plenty of vim and determination, he struggled with adversity, paying his tuition in the Burlington, N. C. public schools doing janitor work, then working in a store at small salary, and finishing his education at Oak Ridge Institute, where he again earned his way, acting as cook part of the time. He returned to Burlington, entering the employ of Williamson, Inc., wholesale grocers, one of the largest firms in that line in the state, at $15 per month. He was vice-president, drawing as large a salary as any member of the firm when he resigned after eighteen years' service. He is now owner of a prosperous automobile business and the leader in his line in Alamance county, handling the well known Ford car. He is popularly known as "Luke." He attributes a large amount of his success to his estimable wife, the mother of four boys and three girls, all living except one who died in infancy.

2979. Colonel James R., son of James W.; banker, manufacturer and state senator, was b. Aug. 16, 1872, in Thomaston, Georgia. In childhood and youth, Colonel Atwater's tastes led him to the study of literature, and especially history. He was never very strong physically, but was more inclined to remain indoors and read than to run out and romp with the other boys. He was a good student. At R. E. Lee Institute, Thomaston, where he graduated in 1890, he finished at the head of his class. Observing the restless and brilliant genius of his son, the father set himself to the task of training it in the right channels. He gave him small tasks to perform, partly to teach him the love of work and partly to keep him out of mischief. He took him into his private banking room and taught him the banking business. The son was active, intelligent and ambitious. It was natural for him to work. In fact, he could do almost anything he tried, except remain idle. There are many such men in the world—the restless, pushing kind. They are the ones who accomplish things, who “bring things to pass.”

The banking business did not occupy all of Colonel Atwater's time. He took some part in social matters. He joined the Upson Guards, Company H, Second Infantry, National Guard of Georgia; was promoted to the rank of Captain, and held the position for ten years. Governor Terrell appointed him Assistant Quartermaster-General of the state, with the rank of Major. In 1907 he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel as an aide on the staff of Governor Hoke Smith; then after serving on the staff of Governor Brown, is now a retired military officer with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He has been Mayor of Thomaston for nearly twelve years. For several years he served as a member of the board of education of Upson county. He is also past master of the local lodge of Masons, is a Shriner, and past chancellor commander of the local lodge of the Woodmen of the World.

He was president of the Thomaston Cotton Mills in 1901 and the Odessa bank of Odessadale; vice-president Upson County Oil Mills, the Thomaston Cotton Mills (since 1901) and the Upson Banking and Trust Company which he founded in 1900. On account of ill health he retired from all these positions, except the Thomaston Cotton Mills where he is a member of the executive committee of the board of directors. Subsequently he recovered and is now in good health again.

He has a long military record. He was captain of “Upson guards,” Co. H, Second Infantry, from Nov. 27, 1899, to July 28, 1906 major and assistant quartermaster-general, state of Georgia, July 28, 1906, to Oct. 9, 1907; lieutenant-colonel, aide-de-camp, staff of governor, Oct. 9, 1907, to June 24, 1909; again from Sept. 9, 1911, to Nov. 15, 1911, retired; lieutenant colonel national guard, retired, June 24, 1909, to Sept. 9, 1911.

On Feb. 14, 1917, he married Annie Elizabeth, dau. of Peter W. and Susan Reid Walton, of Madison, Ga. His wife comes from a long line of distinguished people, who are direct descendants of George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

2998. Lenora S., dau. of Carney Compton; m. Jan. 4, 1888, Rev. Samuel Bryant Turrentine. She was educated at Greensboro College for Women.

(Greensboro Daily News, Wednesday, March 19, 1913.)

Rev. Mr. Turrentine, now president of the Greensboro College for Women, was graduated with distinction at the University of North Carolina with the degree of A. B. in 1884, winning the Greek medal and the prize on moral philosophy. Upon finishing a post graduate course in moral philosophy, history and English literature he received the degree of A. M. from the same institution. Other educational training were a theological course in Vanderbilt university and a correspondence course in Hebrew in Yale and Chicago universities. The degree of D. D. was conferred on him by Trinity college.

Dr. Turrentine has had varied experience as a successful teacher in the state public schools and as teacher and superintendent in high schools. He was superintendent of Union Literary academy, Chatham county, when the school reached its highest stage of prosperity, including the music department and literary curriculum, preparing young men and young women for college. He was associate principal of Institute, Cartersville, Ga., including literary, business, and music departments. He has been associated in conducting examinations for public school teachers. and when elected to the chair of Hebrew and New Testament Greek in Trinity college, assisted President John F. Crowell in revising the curriculum of the college.

Dr. Turrentine has had a wide ministerial and administrative experience, his ministerial life embracing circuits, stations and districts and constructive leadership and administration in various lines. His first charge in conference was King's mountain circuit, and he has served at Winston Centenary, Charlotte, Trinity and Greensboro West Market. As presiding elder he served four years on the Greensboro district and is now on the Shelby district.

During his ministry in Greensboro he was associated in leadership of aggressive campaigns over the state in behalf of saving, rebuilding and endowing Greensboro Female College, including the raising of numerous funds for the institution. For the last ten years he has been a trustee of the college, and for the last twenty years a trustee of Trinity college, and has been actively associated in administering the affairs of these two institutions during the most crucial and constructive periods of their history. He has been an influential member of important boards and committees in church and conference work.

As evidence of recognized administrative capacity the following responsible positions, requiring constructive leadership, were tendered. The presidency of Trinity college at the time of Dr. Crowell's resignation, the presidency of Greensboro Female college, the editorship of the N. C. Christian Advocate and the superintendency of the Children's Home. His children are:

Samuel Bryant, Jr., b. Dec. 9, 1888; m. Nov. 7, 1912, Lucy May Webb, b. Dec. 16, 1894. He was educated at the high school in Greensboro in 1907. 3005. William Mebane, son of John Wilbur; m. Jan. 25, 1905, Ada, dau. of John B. Smith. He d. June 21, 1911. His childhood days were spent on his father's farm in Chatham county. 'Twas here in a Christian home, surrounded by nature and her teachings that the foundation was laid for a sympathetic, loving, disposition that characterized his early manhood and grew with advancing years. When but a youth he connected himself with the Methodist Episcopal church and lived a life consistent with its teachings. Devoted to parents and loved ones he ever found in the home circle life's greatest enjoyment. Generous to a fault, the suffering or need of a fellowman always appealed to him sometimes before consideration was taken for his own well being. No one standing in want before him was ever turned away empty handed. Seeking the good rather than the evil in all mankind, his motto in spirit was: Judge not that ye be not judged and love thy brother as thyself.

Mr. Atwater was in his thirty-fifth year and a young man who gave much promise in life. A student at the Agricultural and Mechanical College, Raleigh, when war was declared with Spain, he was among those who answered the call for volunteers, and served until peace was declared. For several years he had resided in Arkansas where he contracted that dreaded disease, tuberculosis. Several months were spent in southwest Texas seeking to regain health. Later a course of treatment was taken at Chagmont sanatorium, Black Mountain, and normal health was apparently restored. Less than one month he was stricken with tubercular pneumonia, which was the immediate cause of death. He is survived by his wife, one dau.

POEMS BY FLO. I. ATWATER

Miss Florence I. Atwater, of Brooklyn, N. Y., No. 1520, has done considerable writing, much in poetry. The following pieces are some of her selections.

THE MONKEY.

A monkey was born in Africa
In the depths of a jungle wild.
From tree to tree with ability
He swung when a monkey-child.

One day he was caught by a hunter bold
Who shipped him to Italy,—
A terribly frightened little monk,
Shut up in a cage was he.

At last he was bought by an organ-man.
Who fed him and tamed him too;
And many amusing little tricks
He taught monkey-monk to do.

He bought him a cute little bright red suit,
A red and gold hat for his head,
And when they set out on their organ rounds
The monk by a string was led.

He would dance and twirl to the jazzy airs,
Stop,—and hold out his little hat,
He expected that everyone, of course,
Would drop some pennies in that.

Then up he would spring to the organ top,
Where stood a bright cup of tin;
His little hat he would turn inside out.
And empty the money therein.

Children would eagerly crowd around.
 With many a shout of glee
 When they heard the strains of the organ tunes
 For they loved the monk to see.

But oft in his sleep little monk would dream
 Of his home in the jungle wild;
 Of the happy days he spent in the trees.
 When he was a jungle-child.

For it wasn't an easy life they led
 Roving the streets all day,
 And sometimes the organ-man was cross
 If the people didn't pay.

He would jerk the poor little monk along,
 And look very glum indeed
 For what could be done "withouta-da-mon"
 When he had "bambini" to feed?

So children, dear, whenever you see
 On the streets, as you wander through,
 An organ-man with his little monk,
 Be kind to the monkey, do.

SUNDOWN.

The sun sinks out of sight at last
 And darkness comes on thick and fast.
 Soon I must say, "Good Night, dear day,"
 And my head on the pillow lay.

But for a little while between,
 I stand and watch what can be seen
 Upon the quiet street below,
 Before I into bed must go.

The lampman comes with footsteps quick
 And lights the lamps with his long stick,
 Then brightly flames each jet of gas
 To guide the people as they pass.

I see the fathers coming home;
 The lights flash out from room to room;
 And in one house across the street
 The people sitting down to eat.

I slip out of our hall-door wide
 And stand upon the stoop outside;
 No little children are at play,
 For they within their homes must stay.

The trees look dark and strange at night,
 So different from in broad daylight,
 And not a sound can now be heard
 From any happy singing bird.

THE STORY OF THREE LITTLE CHESTNUTS.

A round and fuzzy chestnut burr
 Dropped from a tree one day
 And snugly tucked away within
 Three little chestnuts lay.

Inside the burr was soft and warm,—
 As soft as eider down,
 There must these little nuts remain
 Until they turned dark brown,—

Until, in fact, Jack Frost had left
 A rime along the ground,
 Then wide the fuzzy burr would burst
 And little nuts be found.

Well, finally Jack Frost arrived,
 The burr wide open flew,
 And of the world these little nuts
 Were given their first view.

They looked up at the blue, blue sky,
 And at the great tall tree,
 "How very big the world!" said they,
 "How very small are we?"

They thought it rather nice to lie
 Upon the fallen leaves
 While Mother Tree sang songs to them
 With every passing breeze.

She told them that her topmost limbs
 Could see far, far away,
 To where, upon a distant hill,
 A pretty hamlet lay.

She told them of a river, too,
Of boats with sails like wings;
Of birds that nested in her boughs,—
And other pleasant things.

A-many songs she sang to them—
These little chestnuts brown,
As through the trees the golden leaves
Came drifting, drifting down.

So, there they lay, until one day
Some boys with hoot and shout
Came hunting for ripe chestnuts,
And these little ones spied out.

They popped them straight into a bag,
Then onward went with glee;
“Oh! Oh!” each little chestnut wailed,
“What will become of me?”

Now strange to say, within that bag
A hole, somehow, had sprung,
And through it these small chestnuts went
A-dropping, one by one.

Kerplunk! Upon the ground they fell,—
They didn't care a mite,
As quickly down among the leaves
They rolled away from sight.

And safely hidden there they lay
Beneath the bright leaves' rim,
While far above the mother tree
Sang lullabies to them.

As time went on, what do you think?
Where these small nuts had been,
Three tiny little chestnut trees
Were very plainly seen.

They grew up into great tall trees,—
At least, so people say,—
And there they stand for aught I know
Unto this very day.

THE SOFT LITTLE BUNDLE WITHIN THE HIGH-CHAIR.

It's only a roughly constructed high-chair,
 Yet priceless the treasure we daily place there,—
 A soft little bundle with two restless feet
 That sturdily kick at the shelf neath the seat.

This bundle has bright laughing eyes,—a wee nose,
 A mouth like a rose-bud,—it gurgles and crows.
 With a spoon in each hand it will strum, strum away,
 Contented and happy, upon the chair-tray.

Just when the small face is all covered with crumbs,
 And the cream has been sampled by two little thumbs,
 This sticky sweet bundle must love Mother dear,
 Or fondle dear Daddy, if he should be near.

And as for the huggings bestowed on the cat—
 I wish I could give you a picture of that!
 Poor puss will submit with all possible grace,
 Then suddenly spring from the strangling embrace.

But tell me, oh wise ones, with vast wealth untold,
 Think you, you could buy it with all of your gold?
 In spite of the nights it keeps Daddy awake
 Think you there is aught for this treasure he'd take?

And while this soft bundle within the high-chair
 Requires a patient and unceasing care,
 Yet daily our thanks go to One far above
 For sending us this little bundle to love.

MOTHER.

These are her needles, thimble, spools,
 These are the spectacles she wore,—
 But the dear hands that laid them down
 Will take them up again no more.

Here in its basket, as of old,
 Lies her crochet-work, neatly rolled,
 How fast the nimble fingers flew
 As back and forth the thread she drew.

Such dainty doilies, towel-ends,
 'She fashioned for admiring friends,
 Some done with very finest thread
 In patterns made from-out her head.

Each ev'ning it was her delight
 To sew beneath the lamp's soft light,
 While father greatest interest took
 In reading to her from some book ;

Perhaps Sir Walter Scott's (not new—Scarce one but they already knew).
 They far into the night have read
 When all the household was in bed.

Thus every little work-box thing,
 Both sad and pleasant thoughts can bring
 Of days that ne'er will come again,
 And recollections but remain.

Once more I sit beside her chair,
 And watch the slender fingers fair
 At fancy-work—or harder tasked,
 So quick to do whate'er was asked.

And when in illness someone lay,
 What hands so soft and deft as they!—
 Brave little hands—I pray that mine
 May grow as capable as thine.

JANUARY.

The withered leaves drop from the trees
 But few can now be seen,
 The limbs are bare, and everywhere
 A gray sky shows between.

Of flowers, too, that once here grew
 Not one is to be found,
 Down here below a pure white snow
 Lies sparkling on the ground.

All summer long I heard the song
 Of robin on some bough,
 With swelling throat he trilled each note—
 Where has he flown to now?

Way up on high against the sky
 I see a swaying nest,
 But have no fear, no birds are there,—
 They've flown like the rest.

I do not pine, these eyes of mine
 Can always beauty see,
 In falling rain, in wind-swept plain
 In wildly tossing sea.

What tho' the brook which in this nook
 Sang happily in June
 Is crusted now with ice and snow,—
 All hushed its rippling tune,—

In spring, —why then, 'twill flow again,
 My robin's voice I'll hear;
 New leaves will grow, sweet roses blow,—
 Just as they did last year.

SETTIN'.

Wy honey chile! Whar has yo' been?
 Yo' is a sight fo' sho'!
 Yo' sartin never got dat way
 A-settin' by de do'!

Look at dat aprin Mammy ironed
 Fo' yo', so nice an' neat!
 Look at dat mud! Wy yo' is splash'
 Fum head down toe yo' feet!

Been makin' pics? Lord lov' yo' chile
 Yo' played all morn at thet,
 When little gals is dress' up clean
 Da oughta simply set!

What's dat yo' say? Yo's sorry? Sho'
 I spose a-course yo' ar'
 But dat aint gwine t'make yo' aprin
Clean agin! No Sah!

Thar! Thar! Don' cry. Jes tek it off
 An' stek it in de tub,
 An' when yo' Mammy gits a chance
 She'll gin de thing a rub.

Now chile, yo' listen heah to me,—
 Yo's free toe play an' play
 An' mak' mud pies jes all yo' wants
 De morn of every day;—

But honey, in de arternoons
 When Mammy dress' yo' up,—
 Acts lak yo' is a lady, chile,
 An' set thar on de Stup!

MIRANDY.

Mirandy! Mirandy!
 Yo'll brek mah heart fo' fair.
 Yo' goes a-sailing pas' mah gate
 With haid up in de air

And never giv' a look at me
 A-standing here so glum.
 Mirandy what's I done toe make
 Yo' act lak dat,—how come?

De little buds am burstin'
 On all de apple trees;
 De new grass am a-wavin'
 An' a-wavin' in de breeze;

De lillies am a bloomin'—
 But what I keer fo' dat
 When de flower dat I loves de bes'
 Is on Mirandy's hat.

Oh dat hat it am a caution
 As it droops above her eyes,
 Dem eyes so full o' mischief
 Whar de bery debil lies;

An' dat flower goes a noddin'
 An' a-beckenin' I swear
 As doe it was a sayin'
 "Come an' foller, if yo' dare"!

I stands here night an mawnin'
 An' you' knows it,—yas yo' do,—
 Fo' nothin' else, Mirandy,
 Dan toe catch a glimpse o' yo';

But yo' wouldn't s'pose I's livin'
 Way yo' passes by mah do'.
 .Mirandy, what's de matter?
 Doane yo' loves me any mo'?

THE OLD CLOCK.

A quaint old clock on its bracket shelf
 Had solemnly ticked away
 For years and years in the selfsame place,—
 How many I can not say.

It had queer little peaks around the top
 Like pinnacles on a roof;
 And it held itself in a lordly way
 As of one above reproof.

Its frame was wood and from top to toe
 A paneled glass door was hung,
 With a painting odd in the lower half
 Where the round brass pendulum swung.

Its wheels were wood too, and a great iron weight
 Hung pendant on either side,
 Attached to the works by stout gut cord
 And very securely tied.

A fine old clock with a fine old face
 And a bell that still held its power,
 And rang out sweet and true and clear
 When the old clock struck the hour.

Long had it stood on its bracket shelf
 And gazed at the room below;
 It had watched the generations come
 And the generations go.

It had seen dear grandma with dainty hands
 At work at her knitting there;
 And grandpa, too, with a smile serene
 As he dozed in the big armchair.

Father and son and grandson, aye,
 And even greatgrandson, too,
 Had carefully wound the clock at night,—
 The last thing that each would do.

Tiny tots had been lifted up
 To hark to its tick-tick-tock
 And never a one in all that home
 But loved the dear old clock.

But changes came, as they always will,
 And the last descendant died;
 The clock was sold to a dealer near
 Who carried it off with pride.

The old clock gave one last look around
 At the room it no more would know
 And rattled and shook its weights inside
 As if it were grieved to go.

The dealer placed it upon his shelf
 And rubbing his hands with glee—
 "I am going to fix this old clock up
 And make it like new," said he.

"I'll take this time-worn dial off
 And put on a dial new,
 And scrape the painting from off the glass
 So the pendulum will show through."

So saying the clockman locked his shop
 And went away to his home;
 And the old clock stood there on the shelf
 And stared at the gathering gloom.

Now maybe a truck passed in the night
 And rattled the clockman's store
 For the old clock toppled from its shelf
 And lay in a heap on the floor.

No more would its cheerful tick be heard
 Or its bell ring sweet and fair,
 For the poor old clock was still at last,
 And shattered beyond repair.

The clock dealer found it there next day,—
 All crushed and broken apart!—
 But I myself think the poor old clock
 Had died of a broken heart!
